GEORGE E. CLAYTON TELLS OF RACES AT RIVERSIDE

Local Man Has Fast Horses Entered; Leaves Today for Pomona Fair

That the recent Riverside County fair was the best fair ever held in southern California is the opinion given by George E. Clayton of 200 South Orange street, who had four fine horses entered in the races at the fair.

Mr. Clayton's horses and their entries are given as, Colonel Lou, 4-year-old, trotter, placed second; Little Sunset, pacer, two races; Marguerita de Lopez, 3-year-old, trotter, placed second; Van Lou, 3-year-old, pacer, one race.

"There were 150,000 people passed through the fair gates," said Mr. Clayton, "and it was the finest fair we have ever had in this part of the country. The Riverside fair is controlled by forty-four Riverside business men, who are deserving of much credit for the good, clean sport provided and for the wonderful educational exhibits.

Interesting Exhibits

"There is nothing as inspiring and spirited as horseracing and when it is conducted on a clean basis as at Riverside it is great sport to participate in.

"In addition to the horseracing there were splendid livestock exhibits, showing that California is producing some fine specimens of pure bred livestock. One of the most interesting features of this part of the fair was to see the high school students taking part in the judging contests and also entering some fine animals."

Mr. Clayton left today for Pomona, where he is to enter his horses in the races at the Los Angeles County fair opening tomorrow. Nearly all of the horses entered at Riverside are to race at Pomona.

Mr. Clayton's horses have been entered at the state fair at Sacramento, and at the county fairs at Stockton, Hanford and at Riverside.

VICTIMS OF SEA SAFE UPON LAND

By WILLIAM PARKER
For International News Service.

WILMINGTON, Cal., Oct. 16.—Salvaged voyagers of the sea, the seventy-four passengers and 186 of the crew of the burned Los Angeles-Hawaiian liner City of Honolulu, disembarked here today from the United States army transport Thomas.

The passengers were in a happy mood when they walked down the gangplank, even though some were clad in parts of clothing hastily snatched when the fire call sounded aboard the liner early last Thursday morning when the Los Angeles-bound vessel was 670 miles from its destination.

Vivid word pictures were graphically painted of the hours of peril. Paradoxically though—and in eloquent tribute to the marvels of the radio—no longer did the full horror of being victims of a sea tragedy dawn on the passengers. The naval base, drew alongside and three marines, formidably accoutred with .45 caliber side arms, climbed the "Jacob's ladder" and took up their positions at convenient points where the vessel could be boarded.

Guarded by Marines

"Nobody can come up," a peremptory voice called down from above when a newspaper man sought to follow the marines.

Japanese Gardens Scene of Gathering

Saturday afternoon Miss Alice Livsey entertained a group of friends in the beautiful Japanese gardens at the home of her sister, Mrs. Albert Lewis, 367 West California avenue.

As the guests were teachers, the game of the afternoon very appropriately consisted of guessing the names of books, which were cleverly suggested by the hostess. For instance, a bit of lace in the lavender they all knew was "Lavender and Old Lace."

The refreshments were very dainty—in a green and white color scheme. Those who enjoyed Miss Livsey's hospitality were Miss Bertha Berry, Miss Lorraine Mitchell, Miss Elsie Church, Miss Lorene Fritch, Miss Bess Aldrich, Miss Iva Hunter and Miss Edith Tyler.

Miss Edith Tyler and her niece, Miss Elsie Tyler of 623 North Maryland, assisted by Mrs. Milton Du Chaime of Los Angeles, who was formerly Miss Hazel Tyler, Saturday afternoon entertained with a shower for Miss Margaret McPherson, who is soon to become the bride of Laurence Stuart. Miss McPherson had merely been invited over to dinner with her two friends with whom she had associated in her work as secretary at the Wilson Avenue Intermediate school, and was completely surprised when the other guests came from their hiding places and made a merry party for her.

Gifts Presented

The gifts were presented in a very clever parody on the game of "pin the tail on the donkey," only in this instance a sparkling engagement ring was drawn on a poster which was hung before the doors that concealed the gifts.

Several guests were blindfolded and tried to pin the diamond to its proper place in the ring before the guest of honor had her eyes hidden. Then the doors were silently withdrawn and her groping hands found the packages that were awaiting her.

The decorations and favors were all in Hallowe'en colors and the ice cream cake was orange and brown.

The hostesses were assisted by Mrs. H. A. McPherson, mother of the guest of honor. Those present were Miss Margaret McPherson, Miss Marian Hindman, Miss Carrie Noble, Miss Ada Sadstrom, Miss Elsa Brenneman, Miss Josephine Chambers, Miss Edna Duffy, Miss Carol Duncan, Miss Frances Jackson, Miss Marian Longley, Miss Alice Lookabaugh, the hostesses and their assistant hostesses.

Gland Banditry Is Probed by Officials

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Police today started a systematic canvass of surgeons in the hope of tracing the persons who perpetrated the first case of human gland banditry in the world—the stealing of the vital tissues of Joseph Wozniak, strapping young veteran of two wars.

The police, however, admitted they are no nearer solution of the crime than when Wozniak staggered to his home and said he had been drugged and the gland cut from his body.

Police Captain Thomas Coughlin said it was his opinion that the men responsible for the unparalleled act are of such high intelligence they may succeed in covering all traces of their work.

The authorities discounted the theory that Wozniak may have been the victim of "another man" or an enraged husband.

A move to obtain drastic legislation to cope with gland banditry was started today by State Representative Thomas J. O'Grady. He said he would offer a bill at the January session of the Illinois legislature making the stealing of human glands a capital offense.

Secretary of Navy Gives Compliment to Glendale Youth

Lieutenant J. G. Farrell, son of Mrs. Katheryn Farrell of West Patterson avenue, and who is stationed at Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, has the distinction of being one of the pilots of a seaplane which was the first plane to fly the flag of Secretary of the Navy Denby.

Something new in the world's events was recently demonstrated at Pearl Harbor by the transfer of Secretary of the Navy Denby from a seaplane to a submarine while both naval crafts were on the surface of the sea. The feat was accomplished with HS-2L seaplane No. 46, which took off with the secretary in the forward cockpit and the secretary's flag flying at the bow. Lieutenant Farrell and Lieutenant Kirkpatrick were pilots in charge of the plane.

After flying over the ocean south of Pearl Harbor about thirty minutes in order that the secretary might see the submarine division No. 14 in action, the R-17 was sighted. On receiving a signal from Lieutenant Kirkpatrick, Lieutenant Farrell, who was then at the helm, glided to a smooth landing close aboard the R-17.

After taxiing in as close as possible to the submarine, Lieutenant Kirkpatrick directed the handling of lines incidental to bringing the plane alongside. It required no little skill to make contact between the two fragile hulls without damage to either. Before stepping aboard the submersible, Secretary Denby turned and congratulated Lieutenant Farrell and Lieutenant Kirkpatrick on their good work.

LYNDOL L. YOUNG IS SPEAKER HERE

Speaking in favor of Proposition No. 24 on the November ballot as "one of the most important pieces of legislation yet devised to protect the women of California as well as the business interests of the state," Lyndol L. Young, formerly assistant to the attorney general in the prosecution of profiteers, spoke today noon before the Glendale Credit Men's association. The purpose and workings of the measure were explained in detail by the attorney.

Mr. Young declared that the widows and orphans of the state are being victimized at the present time by a few corporations through a standard form of will. Manipulation of these estates, he stated, is accomplished when a testator leaves an estate in charge of a corporation with full authority to act vested in that corporation.

Then, he stated, the bank or trust company holding the property accepts a profit from the principal and gives a stated earned amount to the widow.

Number of Incidents

Mr. Young declared that following the appointment of corporations as trustees of estates, litigation often follows. He cited a number of incidents of this nature where banks or trust companies had acted as executors.

The speaker stated that there was another purpose for which Proposition No. 24 had been designed. At the present time, he said, disbarred attorneys are dispensing legal advice from offices after having been denied the right to practice in the courts. The proposed law will prevent this, he declared.

REV. 'BOB' SHULER IN WARM ATTACK ON WOOLWINE

Minister Says Candidate for Governor Trying to Reach Job on Beer Barrel

Enthusiasm was the keynote of an anti-Woolwine meeting held Saturday night in the auditorium of the Citizens' Building, 154 South Brand boulevard, under the auspices of the Glendale W. C. T. U.

Rev. "Bob" Shuler, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church, Los Angeles, was the speaker of the occasion.

Mrs. Marie M. Yeoman of 113 North Orange street, county president of the W. C. T. U. presided.

A street meeting of about thirty minutes' duration preceded the regular meeting. At this a number of special W. C. T. U. songs were sung by the campaign committee. This consists of Mrs. Marie M. Yoeman; Mrs. Harrie C. Young of Los Angeles, county vice president; Mrs. Lily C. Richardson of 1856 South Brand boulevard, county corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. V. Bannister of La Verne, county recording secretary; Mrs. Birdie C. Johnson of Los Angeles, county assistant recording secretary, and Mrs. Iola Hatch of Long Beach, county treasurer. The violin was played by Miss Anna Bannister of La Verne.

Hits Woolwine Hard

Rev. Shuler used no gloves in handling the reputation of Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine, Democratic candidate for governor. He characterized him as "an enemy of America," as "a tool of the brewers" and "whose election as governor would be an everlasting disgrace to California."

The speech was frequently interrupted by the applause of the audience. The room was packed and a number of people were obliged to stand because of lack of seating accommodations.

Woolwine is a candidate who "wants to ride into the capitol at Sacramento upon a beer barrel," according to "Bob" Shuler. He asserted that Woolwine was planning to construct a wet machine in California.

"And, if you don't believe that Mr. Woolwine can built a political machine," he declared—"if you don't believe that he takes care of himself politically, why, just investigate the district attorney's office.

Called Tool of Brewer

"Why, the gamblers have Thomas Lee Woolwine's picture hanging up in their joints right now where all may see. He is simply the cheap tool of the brewers, unworthy of the name of Democrat."

"Now is the time for us to ask ourselves if we are American Democrats," he remarked, "and go to the polls and vote against Thomas Lee Woolwine for governor."

Rev. Shuler asserted that he had been induced to take the platform against the Democratic nominee because of "his loyalty to American traditions, his love for California, for his own family and his desire to do his share in "combating evil forces."

'Mr. Woolwine's Dead'

Attorney Woolwine's announcement that he would pile up his enemies like cordwood if they drae to attack him, was satirically ridiculed by Fighting "Bob." He stated that California did not want a governor "who can shoot 'em down faster than he can bury 'em." He added that an extra commission might be added to the numerous commissions existing in this state already to take care of "Mr. Woolwine's dead."

"Bingo Was His Name," was sung by the audience at the close of the speech. Only "Shuler" was substituted for "Bingo." Fighting Bob seemed greatly pleased. Mrs. J. V. Bannister of La Verne played the accompaniment.

A plea for a collection of $20 to defray the expenses of the meeting met with generous response.

ENGLAND MAKES PART PAYMENT ON WAR LOAN

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The first payment by any of the allied powers upon war loans of approximately $10,000,000,000 advanced by the United States was made today by Great Britain when the treasury department turned over $50,000,000 to the American government through J. P. Morgan & Company at New York, American fiscal agent of the British government. This is an installment upon over-due interest upon the $4,277,000,000 lent by the United States to Great Britain in war-time loans and credits. It is believed by British government officials that the beginning of interest payments will go far towards unsnarling the inter-allied debt tangle. Payments are to be made at intervals of six months. The check was drawn against the British government's account with J. P. Morgan & Company in favor of the federal reserve bank of New York.

PLAN ATTEMPTS TO TAKE POWER FROM R. R. BOARD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Congress, when it re-convenes, will be the battle ground for three major legislative offensives aimed at stripping the railroad labor board of all legislative powers, it was learned today. Representatives of agricultural interests will join with organized labor and railway executives in seeking to deal a death blow to the board's arbitrary powers over rail transpotation. Their cause will also be supported by some administration leaders as evidenced by Secretary of Labor Davis' speech Saturday night in which he openly advocated the abolishment of the board. If this offensive meets with opposition from President Harding, it was reported, a compromise might be reached to amend the transportation in such a way as to leave the board a mere advisory tribunal or conciliatory body. The agricultural interests, however, will insist its present powers be greatly limited whether this position meets with administration opposition or not.

PROBE STARTS IN MYSTERIOUS DOUBLE MURDER

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 16.—Within twentyfour hours Attorney General Joseph M. McCran, of New Jersey, is expected to be in active charge of the investigation of the double murder of Rev. Dr. Edward W. Hall, wealthy rector of the fashionable Protestant Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist, and his beautiful choir leader, Mrs. James Mills, near this city on the night of September 14. A new and terrific "drive" will then be started by the combined forces of the state, Somerset and Middlesex counties and New Brunswick to run the murder or murderers to earth in quick time. Officials in their summary of their finding will tell the new state investigator their belief that the slaying was planned by two or more men and one woman and that the shooting was done by one of the men. The theory most generally held is that Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills were either kidnaped and taken to the old Phillips farm in automobiles or were found there in a love tryst.

ELECTRICAL SYSTEM MAY HAVE CAUSED SHIP FIRE

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Oct. 16.—The transport Thomas docked shortly before 9:30 a. m. today and the passengers came ashore fifteen minutes later.

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Oct. 16.—That there was almost continuous trouble with the electrical system of the City of Honolulu from the time the vessel left the Hawaiian Islands until fire was discovered aboard early Thursday morning was the declaration of passengers when they came ashore from the United States transport Thomas today. "From all I could learn the fire started in one of the staterooms on what is called the 'F' deck," said Gus Lachman, a San Francisco furniture dealer who was forced to flee from his stateroom in his pajamas and wore only a discarded pair of seaman's trousers and an old rain coat when he was met at the dock by his brother. "We were wakened by the ringing of our telephone bell about 5:30 o'clock Thursday morning," continued Lachman. "The telephone operator told us in a cool tone of voice that there was a fire on board and that the captain wanted all possengers to come on deck at once, and to put life preservers about us. This was my first experience in a sea accident and I lost no time in obeying instructions, pausing only to fasten a life preserver about my wife. When we went to the upper deck I had on only my pajamas, and she her night robe. When we got there practically all of the other first class passengers were gathered near the bridge. It was still an hour before sun up and a chill wind was blowing, but the ocean was unusually smooth. It seems that there were aboard passengers who had experienced shipwrecks, for I heard a man joking a woman. 'I have been in five shipwrecks,' he bragged. 'Well, she replied with a laugh, "you're only one ahead of me.' Noting that my wife was clad only in her night robe, one of the stewards asked the number of our stateroom, and went below and got a dress for her. That was all he was able to get, for by now the fire was spreading rapidly. In our staterooms, in addition to our clothing were jewels and money, the total of which I would say was $2500. I don't believe that I honestly could say that the thought of this money or the jewelry, some of which we cannot replace, ever entered our thoughts. All we talked and thought about was whether we would escape with our lives from the steamer."

IMPORTANT MEET FOR CITY BOARD TONIGHT, WORD

Expect Matter of Bond Issue for Lighting System to Get First Reading

It is expected that City Attorney Rollin L. McNitt will present to the board of trustees of the city of Eagle Rock, at their meeting tonight, the ordinance that he was instructed to draw up at the last meeting of the board, covering the $25,000 bond issue to take care of the proposed new lighting system for the city. It is believed that this ordinance will have its first reading tonight.

It is understood that this will make three distinct bond issues. The first of $60,000 to take care of additional water supply; the second, of $40,000, for increased fire protection, and the third, of $25,000, to take care of the additional lighting.

The board has not as yet acted on the request of Professor Chandler, who suggested that the annexation proposition be included on the same ballot with the different bond issues, and inasmuch as the annexation petitions have not as yet been presented to the board, it is not thought likely that any action on Professor Chandler's request will be made tonight.

Opening Today of Eagle Rock Store

Today witnesses the opening of a first class meat market, bakery and grocery store at 1025-27 W. Colorado boulevard, that is said to be one of the finest in this section.

C. A. Schulze, who for several years operated a market at 728 East Colorado boulevard, is the proprietor. Modern fixtures have been installed, including a complete refrigeration plant, and nothing but the highest grade goods will be handled, it is said.

The opening of this up-to-date new market will fill a long felt need for the west end, it is claimed.

Mr. Schulze has gained many friends during his three years' residence in Eagle Rock, and there is little doubt as to the future success of his new establishment.

LACK OF FINANCE IN PHILIPPINES HALTS PLANS

Gen. Wood Cuts Expenses to Immediate Needs, Bonds Sluggish

MANILA—It appears that a lean treasury will continue to hamper the work of Governor-General Wood until he leaves the Philippines, as he plans to do in January, and returns to the United States to take up his work as provost of the University of Pennsylvania. Most of the proceeds from the new insular bonds, expected to bring a price near par in New York, will go to reimburse funds from which money was withdrawn during the last several years and particularly during the financial crisis when the government was on a hand-to-mouth basis.

Large sums of land taxes long in arrears are still unpaid; the city has postponed tax payment ths year until September; the provinces want the tax lifted entirely, alleging no profit on low-priced crops, while the Acting Senate President publishes a statement this morning that he is in favor of annulling the new assessment, upon which the bond issue is based.

Bonds Won't Sell

Congress authorized bonds up to 10 per cent of the assessed valuation of real property in the Philippines, which is the amount the administration proposes to sell. Wood is giving the Philippine investor an opportunity to buy these bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest, but money is worth from 9 to 12 per cent on safe securities here, and bankers say that little money will go into 5 per cent bonds.

Because of uncollected taxes chiefly the public schools are already asking donations, tuition fees, etc., from pupils, while the 1923 prospect is that the schools will absorb a full third of the public revenues from all sources. Therefore, while Governor Wood keeps his programme pared down to the most essential items—education, peace and order, adequate courts, necessary public works, including harbor and road building, etc.—the work halts for want of funds just at a time when, because of the low prices and varying demand for farm products, public expenditures, especially for labor, would do the most good.

Mission Censured

The situation is such that many Filipino papers do not fail to censure severely the expenditures on behalf of the Independence Mission, which, they say, received just the answer from President Harding that was expected (and they predicted) and was a failure from the start.

The independent, edited by Osmena's political antagonist, calls attention in a recent article to the fact that the legislature, which is the commission empowered to dispose of the Independence Fund and the body back of the mission to Washington, is dead, and the new one not yet convened. Therefore, no more expenditures can be made from the Independence Fund.

Independents Rule

The party represented by the Independent will be in power in all the cities—Manila, Cebu and Iloilo, while Mr. Quezon's Collectivist party (broken from the Osmena Nacionalists) seems to be certain of control in the legislature.

With the legislature at his command, it is expected that Mr. Quezon will demand that the old rule be followed and the Collectivists be given the cabinet appointments. He, then, and not Governor Wood, will wield the highest power in the islands in many respects, the notable exception being that the veto power vested in the Governor-General by congress cannot be alienated.

Editors, notably the editor of the American Chamber of Commerce Journal, point out that Harding, evidently opposed to independence, gave the mission such a reply as will continue the uncertain status of the islands toward the mother country and make sure that agitation for independence will overshadow everything else in future as in the past (since the Jones bill of 1916 was passed by congress).

GLENDALE K. OF C. WIN HARD GAME IN EAGLE ROCK

Merchants Playing Praised Though Losers; Had Lead at Start

The Eagle Rock Merchants lost to the Glendale Knights of Columbus yesterday afternoon at Eagle Rock park, the final score standing 7 to 5.

While the Eagle Rock boys came out on the short end of the game, they put up an exhibition of major league baseball that gives assurance that Eagle Rock now has a baseball team that it can well be proud of.

The feature of the game was the star base running of Harold Connett, who played center field for Eagle Rock.

The Glendale boys have a good strong team and are to be complimented on the brand of baseball they played. There is no question but Zider who pitched for them was working right, and that he had "something" on the ball that kept Eagle Rock guessing.

Eagle Rock Lead

Up to the first four innings the score stood four to one in favor of Eagle Rock. Berry was pitching for the Merchants, and time and time again there were Glendale boys on all three bases, but with wonderful support and a lot of nerve, Berry pulled himself out of bad holes and the best Glendale could do was one run.

In the fifth Manager Hancock gave Berry the gate and put in Kubeck, but before the inning was over the visitors got four hits and two runs, and Hancock then gave Kubeck the air, and put Hettinger in the box. He pitched wonderful ball throughout the balance of the game.

Eagle Rock got very few hits off of Zider, most of their runs due to base stealing. Connett would steal bases so fast, the visitors wouldn't known he was doing it. In the fourth inning he was on second, and while the pitcher was winding up and before the ball left his hands Connett was on third.

Won Self Praise

Lundo, who caught for Eagle Rock, won himself a place in the heart of the fans in the way he backed up the different players. He was all over the diamond; a close play at first or any of the other sacks would find Lunde right there, and he was right on the job when any of the visiting Knights attempted to steal second or third, and after they saw the way he could throw the ball to second, they didn't attempt it.

Watts at short also played a game that deserves mention.

In the ninth with the Glendale boys two turns to the good, Eagle Rock got a man on second with no outs, and it looked like a rally. "Sonnie" Hancock started to put in Berry as a pinch hitter, but as Berry had been taken out of the game in the fifth inning, the visitors stood on technicalities and wouldn't permit it, and the next two batters fanned.

Snappy Game

It was a snappy game from start to finish. There was a good crowd of spectators, and while there were a few alleged bad decisions that it is claimed favored the visitors there was no argument, and it was noticeable that the Glendale boys didn't do any bragging about their victory.

Manager Hancock claims that he is going to try to arrange to play the same team next Sunday.

NEW THEATRE TO OPEN THIS WEEK

Now Putting on Finishing Touches to New Eagle Rock Movie Palace

It is stated on good authority that the new United theatre, Eagle Rock's new movie palace, will open its doors to the public some time the latter part of this week.

The seats are all installed, and workmen are now busy fastening them to the cement floor, and with but a few minor details to be completed there is little doubt but what the long-looked-for Eagle Rock's own moving picture theatre will be a reality in just a few days.

GEOPHONE PROVES NEW SAFEGUARD FOR MINE MEN

Device Makes Sound Heard Underground; Chief Value In Rescue Work

By HARRY WARD
For International News Service.

WASHINGTON—Designed as a war instrument and used amid the reek and slaughter of the world war for the detection of earth and rock sounds made in the construction of military mines and tunnels, the geophone promises to become an active factor in the saving of lives of miners entombed as a result of fire and explosion.

In the course of tests conducted by the Bureau of Mines in the bureau's experimental mine near Pittsburg, Pa., blows with a siedge on the coal face were heard, by means of the geophone, at a distance of 650 feet, with various rooms and entries intervening.

Magnifies Sound Waves

On a suspended pipe line light hammering with the knuckles was detected at a distance of 1,500 feet. Ordinary talking and singing could be detected through 150 feet of solid coal. By the use of two geophones, one instrument to each ear, it is possible to determine the direction from which a sound is coming through the earth, and thus to locate the approximate position of the entombed miner, bureau experts claim. The bureau has given recommendations for a signal code of poundings by sledge or other means which will establish communication between the rescuing party and those entombed.

The novel instrument known as the geophone was invented by the French during the war to detect sapping and underground mining operations. It was developed by the United States Engineers and the instruments now used by the Bureau of Mines were made according to plans drawn by them, except for the introduction of different diaphragms. The mine geophone is sensitive, yet extremely simple and easily portable. It is essentially a small seismograph, as it embodies the same principles as the ponderous apparatus that records earthquake tremors. It really consists of a lead weight suspended between two elastic diaphragms cutting across a small, airtight box.

Records Vibrations

If the instrument is placed on the ground and any one is pounding or digging in the vicinity, energy is transmitted as wave motion to the earth, and the earth wave into an air wave, which is heard by the ear as sound, and at the same time magnifies the wave so that the sound is louder than if the ears were placed in direct contact with the earth.

The observations of the Bureau of Mines indicate that the geophone should be quite useful in the location of mine fires. They are said also to supply a quick and fairly accurate method of mine surveying. If two tunnels were being brought together from any direction the progress of the tunnels could be observed by means of the geophones, and their relative positions determined.

Another application of the possibilities of the instrument in mine surveying is in the prevention of accidents in blasting through. If two tunnels are approaching each other, or are passing a short distance apart, it is necessary to determine the relative location in order that men may be warned to keep away from the point of danger.

Called to Assist

"Occasionally," said one of the Bureau's experts, "churn-drill holes are dropped from the surface to mine workings for running pipes and for ventilation. When these borings come from considerable distance they sometimes drift, and instead of breaking through into the workings they come down into the solid. The question then is to locate them and to determine whether or not the hole is deep enough to come into the workings.

"Here the geophone finds a useful field, for not only the direction of the hole, but its elevation can be determined accurately. The manifest advantage of the geophone for use in mine rescue work has led the Bureau of Mines to place the instruments on its mine-rescue cars, which are constantly being called to assist in the succor of entombed men at mine fires and explosions."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE LOVELIEST MONTH

I sing today a song of the loveliest month in all the year.

"Then, if ever, come perfect days," said a certain poet about the month of June. I wish he were still alive. I should like to invite him to debate the subject. For I think "Then if ever come perfect days" belongs, both by consideration of weather statistics and by claims of beauty, not to capricious, uncertain, often chilly and disappointing June, but to that jewel month of all the year, October.

I sing a song of October.

How They Bring Back Childhood!

Of the smell of bonfires—that acrid, pungent, memory-awakening smell of burning leaves.

Of the stimulating crispness of October mornings.

Of warm, sleepy October noons,

Of October winds, bracing, cleansing, giving new zest for work and play.

Of sheltered places, out of the wind, where one feels anew a sense of the healing power of sunshine.

Of the sense of plenty and richness that the sight of the harvested grain, the barrels of red cheeked apples, the piles of yellow pumpkins, the high soaring woodpiles, the barns overflowing with hay, gives.

Of a new joy in open fires.

Of blissful long evenings around the evening lamp.

The Cities Wake Up

Of cities, vivid and alive with their crowds of busy, zestful people.

Of shop windows filled with color and luxury, and shops and the marts of trade alive with the cheer and activity of their busiest days.

Of blue skies all day long unscarred by a single cloud.

Don't You Love to Scuff Them?

Of walks in the October woods with leaves scuffing crisply beneath your feet.

Of chestnut gathering and chestnut roasting.

Of brilliant blue water and a tender blue haze on distant hills.

Of moors turned bronze by the October wind.

Of woods made so breathtakingly lovely by the magic of October that the beauty of them is almost a pain.

I sing of October, the jewel month of all the year.

"Then, if ever, come perfect days."

If I were invited to make the world over I should take out April and put in an extra October.

I suppose there are a good many ardent champions of spring who will be glad that there is not great danger of my receiving such an invitation.

Wheat and Corn Cakes—Mix and sift one and one-half cups white flour, one-half cup yellow cornmeal, two teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt and one tablespoon sugar, and add, while stirring constantly, two cups sweet milk. Beat thoroughly until perfectly smooth, then add two well beaten eggs and one tablespoon melted butter. Beat all two minutes and bake on hot griddle.

Scalloped Macaroni and Oysters—Break half a pound of macaroni into short lengths and cook until tender in plenty of boiling salted water. Make two cups of thin white sauce, and when thickened, add two eggs and remove from fire at once. Wash and drain 24 medium sized oysters. Put a layer of macaroni in a buttered pudding dish, then a layer of oysters, cover with a layer of white sauce, then a layer of macaroni, of oysters, white sauce and cover with thin layer of macaroni. Pour over the white sauce, sprinkle with buttered crumbs, reheat and brown in quick oven.

Brown Soup Macaroni Rings—Wipe four-pound shin of beef and cut in one-inch cubes. Brown one-fourth of the meat in hot frying pan in a little hot fat, add cold water to remaining meat and bone and let stand thirty minutes, then add browned meat; bring slowly to the boiling point, cover and let simmer several hours; or over night in the fireless cooker. Add one-third cup each of carrot, turnip, celery and onion, cut in small pieces, ten peppercorns, four whole cloves, one-half bay leaf, two sprigs of parsley and one tablespoon salt, and let simmer for one hour. Strain and cool. Remove fat and clear before serving. (If all of this stock is not needed for first serving, put in tightly covered jars and put in refrigerator, and when ready to use, reheat, add vegetables and seasonings. If the vegetables are added to all of the stock, and only part of it used, the vegetables will prevent the stock from keeping more than one day).

Flank Steak Braised with Vegetables—Have a flank steak weighing about one and one-half pounds scored, or cut across the grain. Mix two tablespoons flour and one teaspoon salt and sprinkle over the meat. Dot with butter, and place in a shallow baking pan. Over the meat place a layer of sliced raw potatoes, add one green pepper, sliced thin, and season with one-half teaspoon salt. Place one-half cup thinly sliced onions next and another one-half teaspoon salt. Pour one cup of stewed and raw tomato pulp over all the mixture, cover pan and cook in slow oven two hours. One-half hour before the meat is done, remove cover to allow it to brown. Water may be needed to be added to prevent burning. Transfer to hot platter, preserving the various layers of vegetables. To serve, slice down through layers as through a loaf.

Beet Salad—Mix one and one-half cups cold, boiled beets with one-half cup finely shredded crisp raw cabbage. Marinate with French dressing. When ready to serve, drain and heap, mound fashion, in lettuce nests; place spoonful Mayonnaise dressing in center.

WHY WE SHOULD BATHE INTERNALLY

Physicians agree that most human ills are caused by accumulated waste in the lower intestine—Headaches, biliousness and "that tired feeling" are but the forerunners of much more serious ailments, and more drugs are used with the mistaken idea of ridding us of this waste than for all other ills combined.

Why not try the unfailing and perfectly natural method of bathing internally with the "J. B. L. Cascade," and keep the intestine always clean and free from all poisonous waste.

Over a million progressive Americans are now using it, have bade good-bye to that half-sick feeling and are consistently proof against many ills, as well as arising every morning clear-headed and eager for the duties of the day.

PLAN AMERICAN WOMEN'S CLUB BUILDING IN SHANGHAI, CHINA

'State Fair,' Featuring Foods Peculiar to Sections of U. S. to Be Staged, Plan

By EDNA LEE BOOKER
For International News Service

SHANGHAI, Oct. 16.—Some five hundred American women, members of the American Woman's Club of Shanghai, with dreams of a greater American community in a few years in this port city of the Orient, are launching a campaign to raise funds to built an American woman's clubhouse in Shanghai.

The first feature of the campaign is a three-day state fair, which will be held this fall in the town hall, when it is hoped that several thousand dollars will be cleared.

The American women in Shanghai come from all sections of America, and a spirited rivalry has been started by having the various sections organized into groups, each group being responsible for its own booths in the bazaar. The groups include the southern states, the Pacific coast states, the middle west, the New Amsterdam states, Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines.

U. S. Food Delicacies

Each section will sell the articles and products typical of its part of America. Besides the bazaar, tiffin and dinners will be served which are typical of the various groups. There will be fried chicken, hot biscuits and sweet potatoes from the Dixie land; baked beans and brown bread from New England, old-fashioned boiled dinners from the middle states and hot tamales, chili con carne and Spanish rice from the west.

A brass band will ride through the town each day advertising the bazaar.

The American Woman's club has grown from a handful of members who met in various homes as a social and literary society some 20 years ago to a well-organized club, with more than five hundred members. The organization is affiliated with the Federation of Women's Clubs of America, and carries on departmental work very much as do the clubs at home, adapting, however, the study of the needs of the orient.

The mothers' section is especially popular, as the problem of bringing up children in Shanghai is discussed from every angle, while the local authorities give addresses, with helpful suggestions, to the women who are trying to bring up their children in a strange land and where the conditions are far different from those in America.

Art Section Popular

The art section is another very successful feature of the club, for the year's program includes the study of Chinese porcelain, prints, painting, precious stones, bronzes and antiques. Visits are made to the homes of various collectors, who display their curios to the clubwomen.

The club during the last few years has been meeting in the ballroom of the Carlton cafe, but so great is the need for a clubhouse that every effort will be made during the coming year to raise the funds sufficient to build.

Shanghai is a city of clubs, but up to the present time all of them are men's organizations—some of which are open to women. There is the French club, the English club, the American Country club, the Cricket club, the Rowing club, the Race club, the Golf club, the Polo club, International Recreation club, the Shanghai club, the American club and the Customs club. But there is not one club building which is open to the American women, or to the British women, for their regular club meetings.

The American Women's club has become such a force along civic and moral welfare lines in this city that the whole American community is co-operating with the clubwomen in their efforts to raise building funds.

NECK AND THROAT MASSAGE

There is never any reason for a neglected or ugly neck, nor any reason why the neck should grow old. Wrinkles are bound to come on the face. The chin line line is certain to lose its firmness. Sensible treatments can only minimize the effects of time, they cannot eliminate them. But the neck can be kept young as long as you have the patience to treat it.

One reason for this is that you can exercise the neck and you cannot exercise the face, you can feed the tissues of the neck with cocoa butter which the complexion could not stand. You can give the neck far more vigorous massage than the face would bear.

Keep your throat youthful.

No matter what your trouble is, begin the treatment by scrubbing the neck with warm water, a mild soap and a moderately stiff bristled flesh brush. This opens and cleanses the pores of the skin but, more than this, it stimulates and invigorates the muscles by bringing up to them a fresh supply of blood. The pores being opened the rest of the treatment is more effective. Cocoa butter or flesh building cream should now be massaged in if the neck is old or wrinkled, otherwise cleansing cream is best.

The massage should be vigorous and should be done with the tips of the fingers of each hand, the motion being the rubbing of small circles on the neck, followed by an up and down motion over the lines in the front. If the neck is shriveled, dry or wrinkled a thick coating of cream can be left on the surface all night if the neck is lightly bound with strips of muslin. This will allow the skin many hours to assimilate this nourishing oil. Such a treatment with cleansing or bleaching cream has been found effective in cases where the neck is sunburned or discolored, but it should be frequently repeated for an old neck.

T. V.—You can remove these shells from the hair by combing with a fine-toothed comb that is kept wet with vinegar. The dandruff shows an unhealthy condition of the scalp. Massage the scalp daily to increase circulation; also use a good hair tonic twice or three times each week.

Waiting—Ordinarily, the skin will only require one thorough cleansing each day. This should be done just before retiring. The skin is then ready for its early morning toning treatment with dashes of very cold water. However, if the skin is badly soiled, its pores filled with soot or other particles, additional cleanings will prevent its becoming grimed. Many busy women in the big cities visit the beauty parlors weekly to have the skin cleansed thoroughly; then keep it up themselves through nightly cleansing.

MANUFACTURE OF FIREARMS

Census reports show that in 1921, eighteen establishments reported as being engaged in the manufacture of firearms, and the total value of their products amounted to $12,510,302, as compared with twenty-five establishments and the total value of products of $30,181,370 in 1919. The decrease in the total value of products was 58.5 per cent. The statistics do not include establishments operated by the United States government. In March, the month of maximum employment, 5201 wage-earners were reported, and in December, the month of minimum employment, 3752, the minimum representing 72.1 per cent of the month of maximum employment.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE—No. II

Last week I gave you some papers on the kidneys and I hope inspired you to a deeper reverence for those wonderful organs than you ever had before.

They are such quiet, busy, effective little organs, never giving any indication of their presence in any manner unless they are abused, and sometimes not grumbling much when they are abused.

Their share of the body's work is to eliminate a large proportion of the poisons that are taken into the body, consciously or unconsciously, and some of the waste products of digestion and the natural result of the wear and tear of the body.

I told you that one of the first things to do in acute or chronic Bright's disease (inflammation of the kidneys) is to decrease as much as possible the work of the kidneys. As you know, a great part of their work is eliminating the waste product of digestion. We can take all of this work away from them by not taking anything to eat for a few days.

In almost any acute illness, a few days' fast is extremely beneficial. But in Bright's disease the benefits are more marked than in other cases. Later milk and other bland foods are given.

In chronic Bright's disease the trouble lasts over a long period of time and it is obvious that the patient cannot be starved continuously. Many people suffering with chronic Bright's disease actually bring on the symptoms of slow starvation in their efforts to relieve the kidneys of extra work. This has to be avoided.

Inasmuch as the kidneys have to do largely with the elimination of the end products of protein (the meat element), it is important to cut down the amount of protein in the diet to the minimum. Salt also must be left out of the diet as much as possible.

It is not necessary, except in acute stages of the disease, to cut salt out entirely, but its use should be cut down as much as possible. (It is probable that most of us eat too much salt anyway.)

Eating beyond the needs of the body is harmful to anyone, but especially is overeating harmful to one whose kidneys are not up to par.

At one time when I had charge of a laboratory, a personal friend of mine, a surgeon, who was considerably overweight, sent his urine to me to be examined. It showed that his kidneys were impaired and I warned him that he should reduce his diet and thereby his weight, and so, take the extra work off from his kidneys. But he didn't heed my cautions. He is not practicing any more. That is, I imagine there is no need for surgery where he has gone.

This brings me to the importance of an examination of the urine occasionally to check up on the condition of the kidneys. I shall take this up in a later paper.

"The mind has as many safety devices as the most elaborately equipped railroad. If this were not so we would all of us be mad with brooding over the unpleasant things we want to forget or the unsuppressed desires for things that we cannot attain." So says Dr. Louis E. Bisch, the distinguished neurologist, who tells how these safety devices work in his new book, "Your Inner Self." (Doubleday, Page & Co.)

The most important safety device is the unconscious or subconscious mind. This is a large reservoir into which the conscious mind dumps memories of unpleasant experiences and desires that cause us pain or discomfort, either because we recognize them as unworthy or because we cannot realize them. But these buried complexes are constantly trying to reassert themselves in the conscious mind. The mechanism which prevents their re-entering consciousness as long as possible is the psychic censor.

"Just as the nurse of a convalescent person withholds letters containing bad or exciting news and delivers to the patient only those which are pleasurable and will not disturb," says Dr. Bisch, "so the mental psychic censor stations itself between consciousness and unconsciousness, as it were, and stands guard. Since consciousness has ostracized complexes through repression, it is the censor's business to see that they remain exiled."

THOSE HISTORIC ANSWERS

It was in Samson's younger days before he was vamped by Delilah. It was also a snappy October evening when his old man found him scuttling through the back yard with something massive perched on his shoulders.

"Hey!" shouted Old Man Samson, "what are you doing with the City Gate?"

"Aw, Pa," retorted the child, "wasn't you a kid once yourself? It's Hallowe'en."

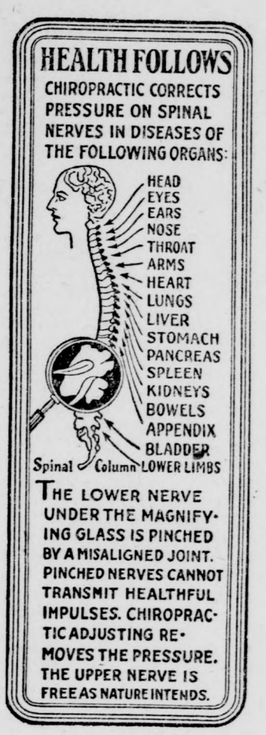
EXCHANGE BRONCHITIS FOR HEALTH

Weekly Health Talk No. 4
By Eble and Eble, Ds. C.

Any one would exchange a case of bronchitis for health and gladly. The truth about health is that it is more natural than bronchitis. Those who have bronchitis are unnatural. They have departed from normal and to recover is easy, provided you choose the method which restores normal bodily conditions.

When the body becomes in a rundown condition and cold settles in the bronchial tubes, there is a cause both for the rundown condition and for the bronchial cold. This cause is in the spine and the chiropractor, by his skill, is able to find the disturbed joints and to adjust them to proper position. When the spinal nerves are freed by his adjustments, health is the natural followup. Neglect of such a condition may lead to tuberculosis.

UNCLE BEN SAYS, "There's many a man, Nevvy, makes the mistake of trying to be as great as his necktie."



Cold Developed Tuberculosis

"I was taken down with a very bad cold which developed into consumption. Several specialists were called. All said there was no hope. Care of children or housework was impossible. Chiropractic was tried and in two years I was cured." — Mrs. Carrie Tingley, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 1342C.

"What's up, sir?" he asked of Simms. "Anything that I can help you with?"

"Oh!" exclaimed the skipper; "so you ain't dead after all, eh? Well that don't change the looks of things a mite. We gotta get that man outa there an' these flea-bitten imitations of men ain't got the guts to go in after him."

"He's got your gun, sir," spoke up Wilson, "an' Gawd knows he be the one as'ud on'y be too glad for the chanct to use it."

"Let me see if I can handle him, sir," said Theriere to Skipper Simms. "We don't want to lose any man if we can help it."

The skipper was only too glad to welcome this unexpected rescue from the predicament in which he had placed himself. How Theriere was to accomplish the subjugation of the mutinous sailor he could not guess, nor did he care so long as it was done without risk to his own skin.

"Now if you'll go away, sir," said Theriere, and order the men away I'll see what I can do."

Skipper Simms did as Theriere had requested, so that presently the officer stood alone beside the hatch. Across the deck, amidships, the men had congregated to watch Theriere's operations, while beyond them stood Barbara Harding held fascinated by the grim tragedy that was unfolding before her upon this accursed vessel.

Theriere leaned over the open hatch, in full view of the waiting Byrne, ready below. There was the instant report of a firearm and a bullet whizzed close past Theriere's head.

"Avast there, Byrne!" he shouted, "It's I, Theriere. Don't shoot again, I want to speak to you."

"No monkey business now," growled the mucker in reply. "I won't miss again."

"I want to talk with you, Byrne," said Theriere in a low tone. "I'm coming down there."

"No you ain't, cul," returned Byrne; "leastways yeh ain't a-comin' down here alive."

"Yes I am, Byrne," replied Theriere, "and you don't want to be foolish about it. I'm unarmed. You can cover me with your gun until you have satisfied yourself as to that. I'm the only man on the ship that can save your life—the only man that has any reason to want to; but we've got to talk it over and we can't talk this way where there's a chance of being overheard. I'll be on the square with you if you will with me, and if we can't come to terms I'll come above again and you won't be any worse off than you are now. Here I come," and without waiting for an acceptance of his proposition the second officer of the Halfmoon slipped over the edge of the hatchway and disappeared from the sight of the watchers above.

That he was a brave man even Billy Byrne had to admit, and those above who knew nothing of the relations existing between the second mate and the sailor, who had so recently felled him, thought that his courage was little short of marvelous. Theriere's stock went up by leaps and bounds in the estimation of the sailors of the Halfmoon, for, degraded though they were, they could understand and appreciate physical courage of this sort, while to Barbara Harding the man's act seemed unparalleled in its utter disregard of the consequences of life and death to himself that it entailed. She suddenly was sorry that she had entertained any suspicions against Theriere—so brave a man could not be other than the soul of honor, she argued.

Once below Theriere found himself covered by his own revolver in the hands of a very desperate and a very unprincipled man. He smiled at Byrne as the latter eyed him suspiciously.

"See here, Byrne," said Theriere. "It would be foolish for me to say that I am doing this for love of you. The fact is that I need you. We cannot succeed, either one of us, alone. I think you made a fool play, when you hit me today. You know that our understanding was that I was to be even a little rougher with you than usual, in order to avoid suspicion being attached to any seeming familiarity between us, should we be caught conferring together. I had the chance to bawl you out today, and I thought that you would understand that I was but taking advantage of the opportunity which it afforded to make it plain to Miss Harding that there could be nothing other than hatred between us—it might have come in pretty handy later to have her believe that.

"If I'd had any idea that you really intended hitting me you'd have been a dead man before your fist reached me, Byrne. You took me entirely by surprise; but that's all in the past—I'm willing to let bygones be bygones, and help you out of the pretty pickle you've got yourself into. Then we can go ahead with our work as though nothing had happened. What do you say?"

"I didn't know yeh was kiddin'," replied the mucker, "or I wouldn't have hit yeh. Yeh acted like yeh meant it."

"Very well, that part's understood," said Theriere. "Now will you come out if I can square the thing with the skipper so's you won't get more than a day or so in irons—he'll have to give you something to save his own face; but I promise that you'll get your food regularly and that you won't be beaten up the way you were before when he had you below. If he won't agree to what I propose I give you my word t tell you so."

"Go ahead," said Billy Byrne; "I don't trust nobody wen I don't have to; but I'll be dinged if I see any other way out of it."

Theriere returned to the deck and seeking out the skipper drew him to one side.

"I can get him up peaceably if I can assure him that he'll only get a day or so in the cooler, with full rations and no beatings. I think, sir, that that will be the easiest way out of it. We cannot spare a man now—if we want to get the fellow later we can always find some pretext."

"Very well, Mr. Theriere," replied the skipper, "I'll leave the matter entirely in your hands—you can do what you want with the fellow; it's you as had your face punched."

Theriere returned immediately to the forecastle, from which he presently emerged with the erstwhile recalcitrant Byrne, and for two days the latter languished in durance vile, and that was the end of the episode, though its effects were manifold. For one thing it implanted in the heart of Theriere a personal hatred for the mucker, so that while heretofore his intention of ridding himself of the man when he no longer needed him was due purely to a matter of policy, it was now reinforced by a keen desire for personal revenge. The occurrence had also had its influence upon Barbara Harding, in that it had shown her Mr. Theriere in a new light—one that reflected credit upon him. She had thought his magnanimous treatment of the sailor little short of heroic; and it had deepened the girl's horror of Billy Byrne until it now amounted to little short of an obsession. So vivid an impression had his brutality made upon her that she would start from deep slumber, dreaming that she was menaced by him.

After Billy was released for duty following his imprisonment, he several times passed the girl upon deck. He noticed that she shrank from him in disgust and terror; but what surprised him was that instead of the thrill of pride which he formerly would have felt at this acknowledgment of his toughness, for Billy prided himself on being a tough, he now felt a singular resentment against the girl for her attitude, so that he came to hate her even more than he had before hated. Formerly he had hated her for the things she stood for, now he hated her for herself.

Theriere was often with her now, and, less frequently, Divine; for at the second officer's suggestion, Barbara had not acquainted that gentleman with the fact that she was aware of his duplicity.

"It is just as well not to let him know," said Theriere. "It gives you an advantage that would be wanting should he suspect the truth, so that now you are always in a position to be warned in plenty of time against any ulterior suggestion he may make. Keep me posted as to all he tells you of his plans, and in this way we can defeat him much more easily than as though you followed your natural inclinations and refused to hold communication of any sort with him. It might be well, Miss Harding, even to encourage him in the hope that you will wed him voluntarily. I think that that would throw him entirely off his guard, and pave the way for your early release."

"Oh, I doubt if I could do that, Mr. Theriere," exclaimed the girl. "You cannot imagine how I loathe the man now that I know him in his true colors. For years he has importuned me to marry him, and though I never cared for him in that way at all, and never could, I felt that he was a very good friend and that his constancy demanded some return on my part—my friendship and sympathy at least; but now I shiver whenever he is near me, just as I would were I to find a snake coiled close beside me. I cannot abide treachery."

POLAR REGION TRADE ROUTE PLAN OF SOVIET GOVERNMENT

Ships Will Carry Farm Tools and Machines Through Kara Straits; Wireless to Guard

By HARRY L. ROGERS
For International News Service

WASHINGTON.—A trade route through the polar seas is the latest project of the Russian Soviet government which appears likely to become an accomplished fact.

The plan involves a fleet of Russian steamers carrying farming implements, tools and other manufactured articles from European ports through the Kara straits, which separate Nova Zembla from the mainland, thence across the Kara sea to the mouths of the Obi and Yenisei rivers, where their cargoes are to be exchanged for the hides, furs and other products of Eastern Siberia.

Already a fleet of five cargo ships is gathering at Archangel for the expedition, according to advices just received here from Helsingfors, and others are expected. Among the vessels scheduled for the Kara sea voyage are the Trotsky and the Arcos, 3,000-ton steamers belonging to the Russian government, which have cargoes taken on at Liverpool and Hamburg.

Under present plans the fleet will carry approximately 10,000 tons of cargo, including agricultural machinery of an estimated value of $750,000. Listed among the consignments aboard the Trotsky and Arcos are 20,000 ploughs, saws and other timber-working tools, 1,000 tons of sheaf-binder twine, chemicals for tanning hides and skins, and shotguns and rifles for hunting. All this material is urgently needed by the peasants of Eastern Siberia, which is scarcely touched by railroads.

The fleet will be accompanied by the ice-breaker Lenin, which has just been fitted out at Newcastle, Eng. Since the presence of ice prevents entering the mouths of the Obi and Yenisei rivers except during about six weeks of the season, the expedition must be exceedingly well timed. The fleet expects to leave immediately and to be back in European waters by the middle of October.

Depots Established

For months soviet officials in eastern Siberia have been preparing for the visit of the fleet. Depots have been established near the mouths of the rivers, that of the Obi being at Novi, and the hides, furs and other products are being brought down to the depots on barges. In some instances the barge shipments are being made over a distance of 2,000 miles.

An experimental voyage was made last year under soviet auspices and according to soviet officials proved the entire feasibility of making at least one expedition a season. It is now planned to make the expedition a regular yearly service.

Actual organizations of the project is in the hands of the All-Russian Co-operative Society of London, which acts for the Russian government. This organization has had full charge of purchases for the cargoes of the ships already loaded, and will also assume responsibility for the disposition of the return cargoes. The "Arcos," as the organization is called, has made its purchases in England, Germany and Austria, some of the ploughs having come from Germany, but the greater part of the farm implements having been purchased in England.

Project Old One

Before the overthrow of the Czarist regime explorers and merchants had repeatedly urged the feasibility of establishing a trade route through the Kara sea to Siberia, but the dangers of the route, combined with official red tape, prevented the carrying out of the plan. The ships which made the voyage last year encountered icebergs, snowstorms and for many days were compelled to plough their way through ice floes. As an aid to navigation the soviet government has set up a series of wireless stations, which are expected to be used in directing the movements of the ships and keeping in touch with them. There are four of these stations now in operation, according to reports, and the fleet at Archangel has been kept informed of weather and ice conditions.

CONDUCTING MATERIALS

In the two preceding articles we dealt with resistance units utilized for current control. We now arrive at a discussion of the material used in them and for other purposes of conduction.

Conducting materials, usually metals or metallic alloys, are utilized in electric circuits, with two purposes in view. In one case a high degree of conductivity is required, while in the other case relatively high resistivity is desired. These cases will be discussed in turn.

(a) If the conductor is transmitting energy to a distant point by means of an electric current some energy will be wasted in the conductor in the form of heat. The loss should be kept as low as possible, and to this end great care is taken in choosing the size and material of the conductor. For reasons of economy the cross section must not be too great, hence a desirable material for conducting lines must have low resistivity and must be abundant and relatively cheap to produce. Such a material is copper. Where lightness is important and where increased dimensions are of no object aluminum is used. Steel is used where great strength is desired and where current is small. For lines that must stand great strain and at the same time be good conductors, such as radio antenna, a stranded phosphor-bronze wire is usually used.

(b) On the other hand, a material used for register coils should have the following properties:

1. The resistivity should be high, so that a large resistance may be realized without too great a bulk.

2. The resistivity should be constant, so that when a coil is once adjusted to a given value there will be no progressive changes in the resistance as time goes on.

3. The temperature coefficient should be small, so that changes in temperature will not appreciably affect the resistance values.

Copper, although used as a conductor, has too low a resistance and too large a temperature coefficient to be useful as a resister. Other metals and alloys have equally undesirable qualities. However, in the alloy manganin or "German silver" a very satisfactory resistance is realized. It has high resistivity and practically negligible temperature coefficient and thermoelectric effect.

LIFE INSURANCE

Reports compiled by the department of commerce from the principal life insurance companies showed a small seasonal decrease in the new business written in July. The total life insurance written by these companies, which represent about 77 per cent of the total insurance outstanding, has amounted to $3,670,837,000 in the first seven months of 1922. This is an increase of 8 per cent over the same period last year. The largest increase has been in group insurance which for the seven months is 117 per cent greater than a year ago. New industrial insurance has increased 15.6 per cent over the same period of last year.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

— BY HOWARD R. GARIS —

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE TRAMP DOG

Once upon a time, as Uncle Wiggily Longears, the bunny rabbit gentleman, was hopping around, looking for an aventure, he came to a place in the woods where three roads branched off.

One road went to the left, one road went to the right, and one road went straight on through the middle.

"Let me see now," said Uncle Wiggily to himself as he twinkled his pink nose, "which road shall I take? It's quite like a fairy story. If I take the left road I may meet a wicked fairy in the shape of the Woozie Wolf, so I think I'll not take the left road."

And it's a good thing the bunny didn't, for, as truly as I'm telling you, the Woozie Wolf was hiding along the left road.

"If I take the road to the right," said Uncle Wiggily, once more twinkling his pink nose, "I may meet a wicked fairy in the shape of the Fuzzy Fox, so I think I'll not take the right paw road.

And it is a good thing the bunny didn't, for lurking on the right paw road was the Fuzzy Fox.

"But if I take the middle road, as they always do in fairy stories," laughed Uncle Wiggily, "I may have a jolly good adventure."

So he took the middler oad and he had an adventure and I'm going to tell you about it.

Along and along the middle road hopped Uncle Wiggily, the dried leaves rustling under his paw, for this was now the fall of the year and the leaves were beginning to fall from the trees. Many of the trees were bare and Uncle Wiggily could look through their naked branches and see a long distance.

And as the bunny looked he saw, coming toward him what, at first, he thought was a moving scarecrow from a cornfield.

"Dear me!" thought Uncle Wiggily to himself. "Perhaps since there is no further use for the scarecrow—the corn having ripened and the crows having gone—perhaps the scarecrow has come to life. And that would be a fairy thing, for a scarecrow is only a lot of old ragged clothes with straw to scare away the crows."

Uncle Wiggily was so sure the ragged thing was a scarecrow that had magically come to life that he started to hop away, when, all at once, from the bundle of rags came a gentle voice, saying:

"Don't run away from me, Uncle Wiggily. I'll not harm you!"

"Oh, it is alive! It is alive! The scarecrow has come to life!" cried the bunny.

"Nonsense!" laughed a voice. "Of course, I'm alive, being a dog, and a friend of your friend Percival. But I can't help that."

And, surely enough, it was a dog inside the torn and ragged clothes of a scarecrow from a cornfield.

"Why—why—what happened you?" 'asked Uncle Wiggily, sitting down and holding his paw over his pink nose to stop the twinkling. "Are you so poor, and out of work that you have to wear scarecrow clothes? If you are come with me and I'll lend you some of my clothes. And I'll ask Old Dog Percival to give you work so you can earn money for a new suit. Come to my hollow stump bungalow."

"Thank you," said the ragged dog with a smile that showed his white teeth. "But I think I can get back my own clothes soon."

"What do you mean?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Well, you see, it was like this," explained the ragged, tattered and torn dog. "I had a good suit and I started out to make a trip and have an adventure. Not far from here I saw a pond of water and I wished to take a bath, as I was dusty from the road. So I took off my clothes and went in swimming. And while I was swimming along came an old Fox and an old Wolf. They took my good clothes between them and ran away, the Wolf with my coat and the Fox with my trousers."

"How unkind!" said Uncle Wiggily.

"Quite shocking!" barked the ragged dog. "Well, I had to get a suit of clothes. Not far away, in a field, I saw an old scarecrow, so I took the clothes off that, dressed myself in them and started out to find the fox and wolf and get back my regular clothes."

"Do you think you can find them?" asked Uncle Wiggily. I mean the Fox and Wolf?"

"If I can come to a place where three roads branch off," growled the ragged dog, "I can get the Fox, for he lives along the right paw road. And the Wolf lives along the left paw road. If I could find that place—"

"I can take you to it," eagerly cried the bunny, "for I passed it not long ago."

"Show me where it is and I'll tell you how I can catch the Fox and Wolf and get back my coat and trousers," said the ragged dog.

So when the two friends reached the left road, the dog told Uncle Wiggily to hop down it a little distance.

"The old Wolf will run out to catch you," said the dog, "but don't be afraid, for I'll be hiding in the bushes, and as soon as the Wolf comes I'll leap out, nip him and take back my coat."

"I'll do it," said Uncle Wiggily, and he did. Surely enough, out popped the Wolf wearing the dog's good coat.

"Ah, ha! Now I have you!" barked the dog, and he nipped the Wolf and took the coat. In the same way, going down the right road, out came the Fox with the dog's trousers.

"Now for ears!" howled the Fox as he saw Uncle Wiggily. But out of the bushes where he was hiding popped the dog. He nipped the Fox, making the bad chap howl, and took away the trousers.

"Now I am well-dressed again," said the no-longer-ragged-dog," as he put on his own things.

"Then please come to dinner at my bungalow," invited Uncle Wiggily, and the dog did. And how Nurse Jane laughed when she heard the story.

So if the cream puff doesn't hide down in the coal bin and look like a chocolate pudding when it comes up to supper, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the Rub Dub.

MOTORCYCLES AND BICYCLES

The department of commerce announces that the census reports show considerable decrease in the activities of the establishments engaged in the manufacture of motorcycles and parts during 1921 as compared with 1919. Twenty-two establishments reported products valued at $13,567,970 in 1921, compared with twenty establishments for 1919 with a total value of $28,609,327.

The number of completed motorcycles decreased from 59,122, valued at $16,11,623, in 1919, to 26,991, valued at $6,438,706 in 1921.

The returns indicate that the combined output of all establishments was only approximately 44 per cent of the maximum capacity, based upon a demand requiring full running time. The percentage of output for individual establishments ranged from 20 to 90 per cent of their maximum capacity.

Census reports also show a marked decrease in the activities of the establishments engaged in the manufacture of bicycles and parts during the year 1921 as compared with 1919. Twenty-four establishments reported products valued at $9,529,779 for 1921 as compared with 31 establishments having products valued at $24,496,568 for 1919.

The number of completed bicycles decreased from 470,675 valued at $12,277,341 in 1919 to 149,192, valued at $6,218,394 in 1921.

START MADE ALREADY

Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, expresses the hope that the same laws, as far as practicable, which he has discovered and demonstrated in plant life will be applied to the improvement of man. He says it can, must and will be done. Well, we have made a start in that direction. We have grafting among men.

International News Service correspondent went to sea in a water taxi and while the big white steamer was breasting a rough sea in the Santa Barbara channel, he obtained a composite interview via megaphone with the rescued passengers.

"Say a good word for Captain Lester, the telephone girl and the crew of the City of Honolulu," called a man who, from his nondescript attire, looked as though he had been outfitted from the transport's "slop chest."

gers. They realized they would be saved. Even while the passengers were being summoned from their berths electric tongues were sending their vibrant cries of distress broadcast over the sea.

Held In Quarantine

Although the transport Thomas arrived off the San Pedro breakwater at 11:30 o'clock Sunday night, the passengers were held in quarantine until morning. The customs service officials invoking the time-honored law of pratique. This ancient rule, its origin a mystery to modern mariners, forbids passengers from foreign ports disembarking in American harbors if the vessel arrives between sundown and sunup. Thus the salvaged passengers last night impatiently paced the deck of the transport Thomas hoping any hour to be allowed to go ashore.

Meanwhile, through the night, the government's quarantine doctors slept peacefully in their bungalows ten miles away.

Although unwilling to be quoted, several of the passengers declared they would endeavor to have the law of pratique repealed.

Shortly after the Thomas dropped anchor, a speedy motor sallied from the San Pedro sub-

Then from the fragmentary narratives called through the ship's megaphone, what follows is the story of the ship and about the fire which broke out on the City of Honolulu.

The liner was completing her maiden voyage, being on her return trip to Los Angeles from the Hawaiian Islands. Formerly she was the Friedrich der Grosse, and from the masthead proudly flew the flag of Kaiser Wilhelm, for she was the emperor's private yacht.

Confiscated by the American government, Freidrich der Grosse became Huron, a troop ship. Recently she was allocated to the Los Angeles Steamship company for service between Los Angeles and Honolulu.

The City of Honolulu was half way to her home port, approximately 670 miles. Wisps of smoke were discovered issuing from beneath Hatch No. 6. This was at 4 o'clock Thursday morning. Ordinarily a cargo fire is not considered especially dangerous, many vessels coming into port with smoking cargo or coal bunkers.

Called to Fire Drill

Captain H. R. Lester immediately summoned the full crew and ordered water pumped into the hold. So rapidly did the fire spread, however, that Captain Lester instructed Betty Stanhope to telephone all passengers to assemble on deck immediately for

PASTOR TALKS ON SUNDAY VISITING

Declares Acceptance to Dine After Church Services Perfectly Proper

"Life without the Lord's Day would be like a desert," remarked Dr. H. C. Funk yesterday morning at the First Lutheran church.

"The man who lounges around home all day and does nothing is a good deal like the ox that is fallen into a pit. He needs to be pulled out of the lazy habit into which he has fallen. He may have plenty of brains but he does not use them wisely for there is great profit in waiting on the Lord. If he will wash his face, put on clean linen and betake himself to the house of the Lord, he will go away refreshed and nothing will rest him more or fit him better for the work of the week than the spiritual exercise of this one hour.

"When a man breaks the fifth or seventh commandment: 'Thou shalt not kill' or 'Thou shalt not steal,' they arrest him and put him into prison. But when he breaks the third commandment, men say he is a good man.

"God said: 'Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.' If it isn't wrong to break that command, then it isn't wrong to break any of the other commandments.

Visiting on Sunday

"Is it right to visit on the Lord's Day? It is wrong to go visiting on Sunday if by so doing you keep someone away from the house of worship.

"Jesus visited on the Sabbath day, but He first taught His followers the Word of God and the people were there to hear the instruction. After the service, Jesus was invited to take dinner at a Pharisee's house and the Saviour accepted the invitation.

"Yes, if you go to church and a neighbor invites you to dine with him, accept the invitation or invite some one home with you. But it is absolutely wrong to stay at home and neglect the worship of Almighty God to get up a big dinner for some friends.

"Another class lounges around the house all day and does nothing. If it is right for them, it is right for all of us. If we should all stay at home, what would become of the house of God? Do this and we would all become heathen.

"Every day in the week is used as a day of rest by some religious body. The Greeks rest on Monday; the Persians on Tuesday; the Assyrians on Wednesday; the Egyptians on Thursday; the Turks on Friday and the Jews on Saturday."

practice fire drill. This forethought of the captain, passengers said, undoubtedly allayed fear and prevented what otherwise might have developed into a fatal panic.

Most of the passengers, men and women, came laughing to the main salon, amused at the odd assortment of kimonos, bath robes, pajamas and night robes suddenly put on display.

Shortly it dawned on the sleepy throng that the fire drill was a grim reality.

The ship orchestra began to play. The air was "Three o'Clock in the Morning." This familiar and tuneful air calmed any tendency at nervousness. Partners paired off to dance. Then the ship listed and the order came to take to the boats. It was all done calmly and the fourteen boat loads faced their vigil until rescue came with the same fortitude they displayed on learning of the fire.

There were 20,000 school children killed in the streets of American cities last year, and the pity of it is nearly every one of these cases was traceable to carelessness.

CHRISTIAN MUST HAVE HIS CREED

Rev. C. A. Cole Tells What True Believer Requires; Get Words Inside

"What is a Christian?" was the inquiry yesterday morning at the Central Christian church.

"True Christianity may be described as a trinity: It includes doctrine, an experience and a life," asserted Rev. C. A. Cole. "It demands the homage of the intellect that the truth shall be believed. It requires the homage of the heart and that truth shall be felt. It demands the homage of life and that the truth shall be obeyed.

"A Christian is a man with a creed, an experience and a life. Many mistakes have been made here by both friends and foes of Christianity. Some have insisted that it was only a creed. Others that it was only an emotion to be felt—unmindful of the fact that a faith always lies back of and gives rise to emotions. Others have said that it is only a morality ignoring both its faith and experience.

One Must Have Belief

"A Christian is a man with a creed. It is popular to sneer at creeds. People talk of them as if they were the husks and useless wrappings of precious kernels to be stripped off and thrown away. If the Bible is not true, it is not binding. But, if its teachings are true, then they are fixed. A man who doesn't have beliefs and convictions founded on testimony from true men is usually driftwood on the turbulent stream of life. A man doesn't have to be a theologian. He may apprehend what he cannot comprehend. But I do insist that the church shall have a fence of doctrine about it and not be an open common where men of all creeds and no creed shall be all and equally at home.

"We need positive convictions on fundamental teachings of truth in these days when it's popular to preach a religion of ethics and mental therapeutics which cares not whether Christ is just a good man or the Son of God from on high.

"All strong men of both yesterday and today have been of positive beliefs. It must be so. A man uncertain in his footing cannot do any earnest and worthwhile work.

"Some have tried to persuade men that religion was only a creed. About all that is required in some quarters today is that a man shall pay his pew rent and keep out of jail. But paying and being decent morally in daily walk is not all. Christ and His words must get inside of us."

MANY THOUSANDS OF GREEKS FLEE

Great Confusion Results As 400,000 Refugees Leave Eastern Thrace

By JOHN HADLEY
For International News Service.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 16.—Twenty-five hundred Turkish gendarmeries crossed into Europe today for police duty in eastern Thrace under aliled supervision.

Unconfirmed reports have been received here of massacres of Greek and Armenian Christians by Turks at Ezine, twenty-six miles south of Chanak. These reports are discredited here as it had previously been announced that all the Greeks were out of Anatolia and Ezine lies in the northwestern corner of Anatolia.

Evacuation of 400,000 Greeks from eastern Thrace is under way amidst great confusion. Railway stations and docks are besieged with Greek men, women and children seeking places on trains and boats. They are carrying with them their personal effects.

Turkish troops are reported to have destroyed the town of Kili, in the neutral zone, inhabited mainly by Greeks. Many Greeks are said to have been killed and others, including women, were carried off. The Greeks claim this destruction was the work of gendarmeries bound for Thrace.

Southeastern Europe experienced its coldest weather during the winter of '63-'64. The Bosphorus and the Euxine sea were frozen.

DESTRUCTION IS PASTOR'S THEME

Home, Church and School In Sermon Delivered by Dr. J. F. Winnard

"Destroying the Foundations," was the topic chcosen by Dr. James F. Winnard for his sermon last night at the Tropico Presbyterian church.

"The three foundations of which we speak are 'the home,' 'the church' and 'the school.' he remarked.

"In these days there seems to be a determined effort on the part of some to undermine the fundamental principles upon which each has been established and to nullify all the good that might come from each in the unhampered exercise of its rights.

"That was a wise minister who announced that he would preach a sermon on 'Home Government' and asked that all the children be present. For it is a fact that in these days the whim of the child very largely controls the acts of the parent, especially as related to home government. The family altar, that great factor in holding the family together in the good old days is almost a forgotten practice.

"Happy is that family that can find some time in the twenty-four hours of the day when the whole family may spend a little time together in the worship of God. That family need not fear that its foundations shall be destroyed.

"Another foundation is the Church. There is a determined effort to overthrow the church by taking from under it the very foundations upon which it is built. Its book, its time of service, its day of worship, are all being openly and brazenly attacked by those who, had they lived in the day our Lord was on earth, would have been among the first to cry out, 'Away with Him, crucify him.'

"The ball ground with its pandemonius to break the quiet of a Christian Sabbath afternoon, the street playing gangs who have the effrontery to push their work even at the very doors of the church during the hour of divine worship —these and scores of other things besmirch the good name of the "Clean City Kept Clean" and destroy the very foundations upon which both true home and national life are builded.

"The other foundation that is being destroyed is the school. Over 20,000,000 of the young people of our land are in the public schools of this country. They are there not only that text book knowledge may be gained, but that character may be builded.

"In our own goodly state the Christian element should hide their heads in shame that the Bible is a prohibited book in our public schools. We saw to it that every soldier in camp and field was provided with a copy of this book but we will not permit our boys and girls to hear it read.

"The Bible—that greatest aid in all this world to true character building—is kept out while the dance, the most prolific source of immorality among the young people in any community, is encouraged."

The war department announces the sale of 7504 European type railway cars to the republic of Poland for the sum of $4,802,560. The cars are stored in the yards in Norfolk and New York, and because of differences in type and gauge are not available for use on American railroads, having been built during the war for the use of the American army in France. They were sold under sealed bids, eleven offers being received, of which the Polish offer was the highest. The bulk of the cars are of the gondola type, although there are some flat cars and a few special type continental box cars.

BIBLE REVERENCE IS GREAT NEED

Greatest Knowledge Found In Good Book, Says Rev. C. M. Calderwood

"Reverence for the Bible," was the topic of the sermon yesterday morning in Odd Fellows' hall, which is now serving as the meeting place for the Congregational church.

"Without the Bible we would be without the great revelation of God," asserted the Rev. C. M. Calderwood. "Without it, our knowledge of God, if we had any, would be crude. Without God we are without hope in the world. So the world needs its Bible. We need to reverence the Bible and to teach reverence for it.

"It is useless for us to say that we reverence the Bible if it does not interest us enough or grip us enough that we do not study it. Simply saying that the Bible is the greatest book in the world is not reverence for it. Reverence for it must mean that we will both read and study it. We will want to study its history, its authorship and its greatest revelation if we have reverence for it. We must not hesitate to bring to the study of the Bible all of the scholarship at our disposal. Increased scholarship means not a lesser Bible, but a greater one.

"Knowledge of the Bible means a knowledge of the historic background of the Bible, something about the authorship of its books and the purpose of the different books.

"If we reverence the Bible, we will not only study it but we will teach it. The world needs 'God, and it needs the progressive revelation of God that we have in the Bible. When we study it with care and honesty we find a much fuller revelation of God in the Christ of the New Testament than we find in the early religious life of the Hebrew people.

Studying Bible

"Reverence for the Bible means we will not be afraid to study it fearlessly and intelligently. Saying that it is wonderful but keeping it closed is not reverence.

"God in Jesus Christ is its supreme revelation. Then reverence for the Bible means that we will make its Christ the master of our thoughts and actions. Jesus' teachings centered about the Kingdom of God. If we do not make the Kingdom of God, a world ruled by God, the chief object of our lives we do not reverence our Bible or its Christ.

"If the Bible is the charter of liberty, if it shows the way of salvation for our souls and of the world by inaugurating the Kingdom of God, let us study it regularly, diligently, fearlessly and honestly and live the highest life that it portrays."

Pacific-Southwest Review

HERMAN NELSON

The evolution of the safe deposit box is an interesting study. The strong box of old was a treasure chest with many chains and locks, but, although it looked strong, the thief found that several hard blows with a hammer or ax would generally give him possession of the wealth and savings of the owner.

The well-to-do families set about to overcome this fault of the treasure chest, and the house safe was the result. This was usually about the size of the large-sized phonograph of the cabinet style, and was either built into the house itself or placed in some suitable place. But it was shortly found that even the best manufactured safe could not withstand the cunning of experienced thieves, and was only a slight protection from the attacks of amateur thieves and fires. Also, the modern small house or apartment is frequently too small to permit a house safe, and if such is rented, there is the additional hardship of moving the safe about. These factors, and a cost that has increased threefold, have caused the house safe to become almost extinct—at least for the protection of papers that are of extreme value.

Co-operation at this point entered to save the situation. Banks have found that by placing in their large fire-proof and burglar-proof vaults various sized safety boxes, and co-operating with their customers by renting the use of these boxes, that the precious possessions of their customers are safeguarded, and that the bank may derive some revenue for the upkeep of enormous vaults that had been installed at tremendous expense. The people of a community where such safety and security are offered at a small cost have, from the beginning, availed themselves of the advantages of the safety of a large and expensive vault which they themselves could never have hoped to own privately. Such is the result of co-operation between the banks and their customers.

While this arrangement by the banks has brought the people who formerly had home safes to the vaults of the banks, the greatest number of people who have availed themselves of the advantages of a bank deposit box, have been those who could not afford the home safe, and thus protect these people who could least afford to lose their valuables. Indeed, this result is a most happy one.

Many people take advantage of a safe deposit box to safeguard their valuables while upon a motor trip; and in the Pacific-Southwest this means a good many weeks in the year, for the climate and condition of roads permit such trips throughout the year. Jewelry, silver and trinkets are of no use on a motor excursion, and the safe deposit box at the bank offers the best protection that could be afforded the owners during their absence.

Safe Deposit Boxes of various convenient sizes may be secured at a small yearly rental in the fire and burglar-proof vaults of the Glendale avenue and Brand boulevard Branches of the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank.

The T. D. & L.

It's "Now or Never" for the T. D. & L. patrons today and tonight and it is said to be one of Harold Lloyd's funniest comedies.

In addition the program includes the picturization of Peter B. Kyne's "The Long Chance" with Henry Walthall starring, supported by Marjorie Daw and Ralph Graves.

"The Long Chance" is a western play with plenty of action and has been highly praised by those who have seen it.

The Glendale

"Remembrance," the film attraction at the Glendale Theatre, is a story of character rather than plot. The scene is laid in a medium sized town where the father has built up a successful department store and the mother has acquired social ambitions in which she is seconded by her sons and daughters. In order to meet the ever-increasing bills, the father works until he collapses.

Only when he is on the verge of death does the family realize its selfishness.

Former Kaiser and Crown Prince Sick

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 16.—Both the ex-kaiser and the former German crown prince were reported ill today.

Word from Doorn said that the ex-kaiser's condition is not serious and that members of his household believe that his illness will not interfere with his marriage plans.

The ex-crown prince is in more serious condition. He is reported to be threatened with serious lung trouble, due to the damp climate on Wieringen island, his place of exile.

Statistics show that the majority of divorces are sought by women between the ages of twenty and twenty-five.

Jap Government In War on Profiteers

TOKIO—The Japanese government has started a drive on the profiteers. Nineteen items of action destined to reduce prices have been made public. The press and people, however, hail the programme as lukewarm, but cabinet officials declare it is only a start.

One of the steps is exclusion of specie held abroad from the currency reserve fund, but this sum has been so greatly reduced during the depression that action now means little. Other plans for the most part have to do with quicker and cheaper transportation of food products and the establishment of public markets.

The last revolutionary soldier died in 1869, at the age of 109. At that rate there will be at least one Civil war veteran alive in 1953!

TROJANS FAIL TO SHOW CLASS IN GO SATURDAY

Defeat Lighter Team After Hard Struggle; Plenty of Training Need

Following Saturday's football clash between U. S. C. and the University of Arizona, in which the former emerged victors over their lighter opponents only after the hardest kind of a scrap, the principal question in the minds of practically every one of the some 12,000 thrilled spectators was:

"How can this outfit expect to compare against the powerful California eleven on October 28?"

If the Trojan-Wildcat battle, which resulted in a score of 15 to 0, may be classed as a criterion on the strength of the southerners the U. S. C. backers may as well pay up their bets right away and save future embarrassment. In other words, the showing of the Cardinal and Gold squad was punk! Outweighing their rivals from the desert by approximately fifteen pounds to the man, they were doped to amass a total of no less than five or six touchdowns. But, to the utter surprise of their most ardent supporters, the Wildcats' line was crossed but twice, both coming in the final period when the rapidly tiring visitors were outdone by fresh reserves from the Trojan bench.

Holding Them Down?

Whether Coach "Gloomy Gus" Henderson is holding his players down and having them appear as a bunch of "goofs" is a matter of conjecture and cannot be determined until the evening of the 28th. At any rate, one thing is certain—that not even the semblance of trick play, false formation or puzzling forward pass was evident in Saturday's combat, Henderson taking no chance of California scouts stealing any of his "stuff" for delivery to one Andy Smith before the Bear-Trojan clash.

The one thing for which U. S. C.'s followers may be thankful is the fact that this year's ends are a one hundred per cent improvement over the 1921 wingmen, who were admittedly the weak spot of the squad, especially in the Berkeley game. Both Milton and Boice, who will probably be the regulars, are big fast men who are capable of taking care of themselves in any company.

Whether it be going down under punts, running interference, receiving forward passes or stopping opposing players, this pair of flank experts will do more than their share for U. S. C. this year. In addition to this Milton is regarded as one of the best and most accurate drop-kickers on the coast this year.

Fight to Hold Jobs

Dick Emmons and Hayden Phythian, the reserve ends, are almost on a par with the regulars, who are kept continually "on their toes" in order to hold their jobs. All four are superior to Paul Green and Jimmy Smith, last year's ends.

Aside from Captain Leo Calland and Lowell Lindley, Henderson's heretofore impregnable line looked none too good against the Arizonians. With Johnny Boyle on the hospital list for the remainder of the season the Methodist institution loses the best lineman in the West, and it is probably this fact that accounted for the poor showing of the forward wall. It should be stated, however, that Norman "Swede" Anderson had not entirely recovered from a severe cold which he contracted following the Pomona game. With this goliath in his regular form the whole appearance of the line would have undoubtedly been altered.

In the backfield Henderson took no chances with his big ace—Roy "Ironsides" Baker. The two-headed halfback has been acclaimed as the greatest line plunger that has ever worn a Trojan uniform, and is regarded as one of the very best ground gainers on the Pacific coast. For no apparent reason, other than that of camouflage, he was jerked from the lineup shortly after the start of Saturday's game.

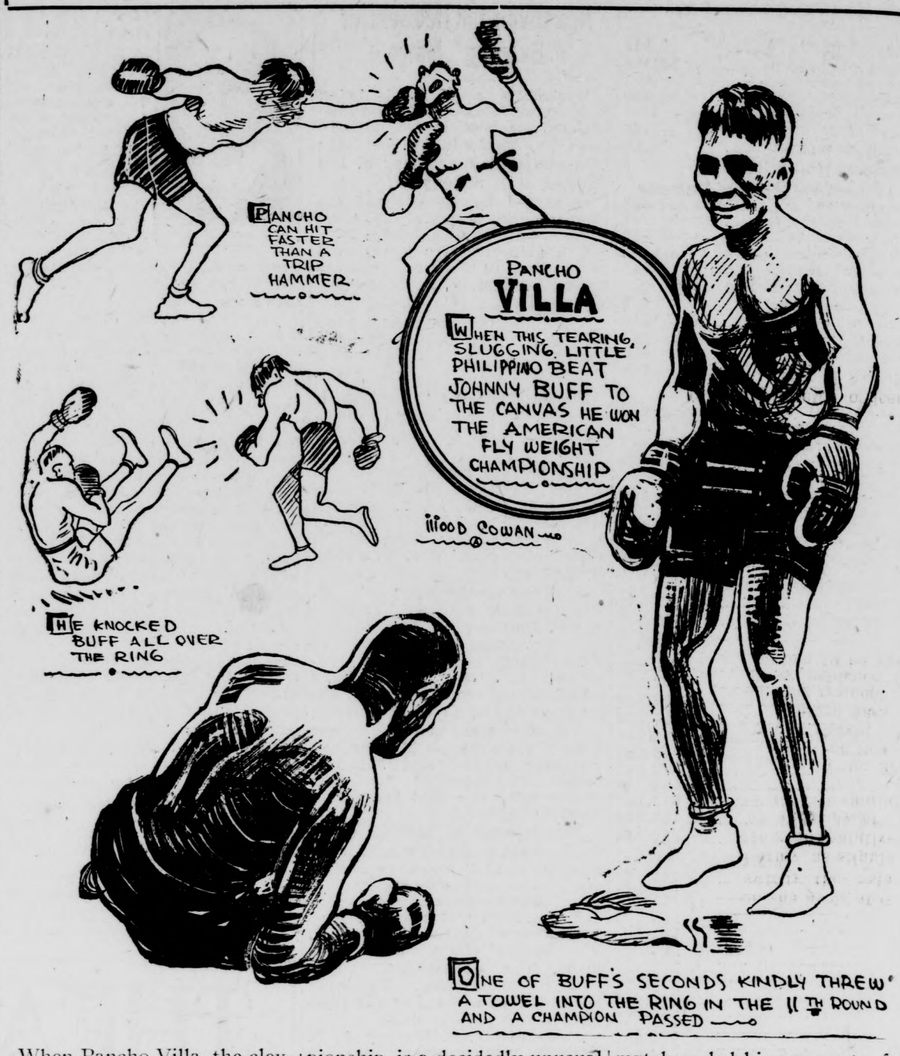
Shine Up Like Stars

Among the other backs the most interesting battle for a berth appears to be that between Chet Dolley and Amor Galloway at quarter. Together with Gordon Campbell they were U. S. C.'s outstanding stars against the Wildcats, each turning in several sensational runs and playing a consistent game throughout. Galloway's generalship seemed to have an edge on that of Dolley, but this may have been due to the fact that Galloway took over the reins with a set of fresh backs at a time when the opposing warriors were on the verge of collapse.

"Hobo" Kincaid and Phil "Flash" Tiernan showed streaks of fine form, although the latter was not given sufficient chance in his long suit—end runs and off-tackle plays—to exhibit his usual high class performance. Wayahn, Harold Galloway, Eddie Leahy, Otto Anderson, Riddle and King are all good men, but hardly up to the caliber of those first named.

From now until the Bear game the following questions will be asked over and over again: "Will Henderson surprise California with a kicker who can stand up with Archie Nisbit?" "Will either of the two lines have an advantage over the other?" "What kind of plays will win the game?" "Who will be in the backfield for U. S. C.?"

IN THE SPOTLIGHT OF SPORT By WOOD COWAN



PANCHO CAN HIT FASTER THAN A TRIP HAMMER
PANCHO VILLA
WHEN THIS TEARING, SLUGGING LITTLE PHILIPPINO BEAT JOHNNY BUFF TO THE CANVAS HE WON THE AMERICAN FLY WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP
WOOD COWAN
HE KNOCKED BUFF ALL OVER THE RING
ONE OF BUFF'S SECONDS KINDLY THREW A TOWEL INTO THE RING IN THE 11 TH ROUND AND A CHAMPION PASSED

When Pancho Villa, the clever little Filipino, K. O.'d Johnny Buff and won an American championship, he performed a feat that has never been equaled by any other Oriental.

In the Philippines they are just as much excited over Villa as South Americans are over Luis Pirpo, the heavyweight; and justly so, for Pancho is a fighter, every 110 pounds of him. He knocked Buff from pillar to post with his tearing lefts and rights. He was all over Buff from gong to gong. And for a member of the Malay race to fight his way into a major title, and to be good enough to win a world's championship, is a decidedly unusual thing. Several negroes have held honors of that kind, but no Oriental has ever come close to winning a title.

If Villa can pull Champion Wilde out of retirement a world's title might be his.

Villa's real name is Francisco Tingson. Discovered by Elino Flores, the Filipino lightweight, it wasn't long before he had cleaned up the native crop in his own weight. He then took on Mendes, an Australian, who stopped off at Manila on his way here to fight Wilde, bent on making a little expense money.

Mendes was unfortunate enough to pick Villa and that match ended his prospects, for Mendes hasn't been heard of since, and Pancho started after Buff.

This tiny Filipino is an exceedingly polite little fellow. Although he fights like a tiger when the bout is on, he displays the utmost concern over the welfare of his victims the moment the fight is over.

His style of fighting is spectacular and he possesses such a pleasing personality that he wins the fans over to him in a jiffy. He is by far the most popular little boxer to visit this country since Jimmy Wilde came here from England, and as a fighter Villa is a real champion.

MERCHANTS FAIL TO STAGE GAMES

Say Reorganization to Take Place Before Going on With Schedule

The Glendale Merchants played no game yesterday, and it is probable that they will not play again until a reorganization has taken place, it is announced.

There has been talk of changes in the air for some time, but the recent defeats at the hands of the Eagle Rock Eagles and the Calpaco Paints seemed to have discouraged the boys a bit.

While the present plans for the club's future are somewhat vague, it is understood that the grounds at Park avenue and San Fernando road will be improved before the team again gets into the race.

Some time ago it was announced by John A. Cobb, manager of the Merchants, that the team would play a number of important winter games, and it is expected that the reorganization will take place at once so as to go on with the schedule that had been prepared.

FREE STATE ARMY CALLED 'LOVABLE'

Friendly, Not Familiar, Men Call Their Officers by First Names

By EDN HUBER CHURCH
For International News Service.

DUBLIN—The most lovable army in the whole wide world is the Irish free state army.

The Irish free state army is just an infant army, both in personnel and in age. The soldiers of the army are mere boys—carefree boys, whose blue eyes snap and whose lips are ever parted in smiles.

Though in existence less than a year this infant army has seen real warfare and has been whipped into an efficient fighting force. It is different from any other army in the world—it wouldn't be Irish if it weren't. The Irish temperament is peculiar, and perhaps that is why the private soldiers of this army are often heard to address their officers as "Dick" and "Jim"—and it seems that in this instance familiarity does not breed contempt.

Smartly Garbed

The Irish army is smartly garbed and presents a soldierly appearance, with neat olive-green uniforms, black caps, shiny leather puttees and brass buttons—oh, such shiny brass buttons!—all inscribed with the harp of Erin.

No one can doubt the courage of this Irish army—courage stands out all over the army individually and collectively, and men who nightly must cope with unseen enemies fighting from housetops and throwing bombs from behind stone walls must be men of courage, and these are boys of courage. The average age of this army is probably less than 21.

Fights for Ideal

Here is an army fighting for an ideal, it would seem. Certainly it is not an army fighting for pay, for the pay is small. Private soldiers draw about 50 cents a day, and generals draw about $25 a week. Once again the wisdom of the leaders crops out, for the Irish appetite is recognized. The army is well fed, its ration being more than adequate, and Irish boys do love to eat.

Courtesy is another virtue of the Irish army. There is a boyish shyness about the army that replaces the smirking boisterousness of the most of the world's soldiery. One never gets a discourteous word from an Irish soldier.

REDS CUT ARMY, BUT IMPROVE IT

Russian Soviet Will Have Trained Men In Case of Future Wars

MOSCOW—On the heels of Genoa followed swiftly the reduction of the Red army, as stipulated by the Soviet representatives. Russia has today an army of a million instead of five million men a year ago.

That this reduction in the Red army does sot mean that Soviet Russia is going to be caught unprepared in case of future wars is evident to anyone long resident in Moscow. No better evidence of Russia's determination to be able to meet its future enemies within and without is needed than the graduation ceremonies of the National Military academy held in Moscow last month.

The course given by the academy is attended by selected men in order to qualify them as officers of the General Staff and the highest military posts. It is Russia's West Point, with this exception — that its student body is composed not only of peasants and workers, private soldiers and petty officers who have shown special qualifications, but also it has as students members of the old General Staff of the Red army.

Speaks to Graduates

Sklyansky, Acting Minister of War, Trotsky's chief aid, in speaking to the graduates, said:

Speaks to Graduates

"These graduation exercises of the first students of the Military academy signalize one of the most important moments in the development of our national defense. From this time forth the Red army will become richer by reason of the addition yearly of several hundred highly trained and specially qualified military experts.

"You men will occupy the most important role in the defense of Russia, and I would emphasize above all else that no officer can be successful who shuts himself off from contact with the soldiers in the rank and file. There is no place in the Red army for the officer who cannot and does not form close spiritual ties between himself and the soldier in the ranks."

There are times when poverty is no credit to a man.

The Sport Crucible

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—One of the best young football players the writer has seen in an early season game is Leland Parkin, quarterback of the Iowa university team, which beat Yale on Saturday. I might have said that Parkin beat Yale, but that would not be altogether accurate.

Parkin did do nearly all the ball running and passing that brought about Yale's defeat but like the man in jail he would have got nowhere if he had not been afforded as fine a bit of protection as a backfield star ever received. The Iowa sweep interference was above criticism.

It was Parkin's first big game and just as Vincent Stevenson at Pennsylvania and Benny Boynton at Williams, former all-American quarterbacks, dominated the situation in their first start under colors, so did Parkin dominate the Yale game.

It is not of record how many times Parkin carried the ball against Yale, but at a guess, I would say that he did so on ninety per cent of the running plays while he was in the game. Locke also showed amazing generalship.

Two of Parkin's gifts were speed and intuitive ability to pick openings; a third was his accuracy in tossing forward passes and a fourth his judgment in running the team. He seemed to be one of those rare young men who have football instinct.

SPORTS CHATTER

We are constantly hearing that this man is a "good" sport, or that chap is a "poor" sport.

The average man is usually a "good" sport, the terms in which we are talking applying to competition in all branches of competitive sport. There are spasmodic instances of a player or opponent losing his temper and acting in a way hardly in keeping with the ethics of a good loser.

The term of "sportsmanship" can best be illustrated by typical examples. For instance in 1912 just before he sailed for the Stockholm Olympic games, the late Ralph Rose showed his real unselfish sportsmanship in a meet at Oakland, Calif., when through his own coaching and encouragement of a competitor he was defeated in the shot put. Rose was always noted as being a happy-go-lucky chap who always wanted to help athletes perfect themselves in their particular event on the field and particularly so in the shot put at which he was world champion. On this particular occasion Rose was entered in a contest in which one of his opponents was Reg Caughey, then a school boy, and later one of the leading shot putters of this country, due in a great measure to Rose's coaching. Caughey had a seven-foot handicap in this meet on Rose. The champion had done 51 feet, equalling his world record. Caughey had done 44 feet, which with his handicap tied Rose for first place and each had another put. Rose saw the possibilities in Caughey and encouraged and showed him before his put how to increase his distance. Under Rose's guidance Caughey heaved the shot 44 feet 4 inches and Rose was unable to better his own best put and Caughey won. That is a typical example of good sportsmanship.

In 1909 Carl Gardner was playLarned in New York in the semi-finals of the National tennis tournament. Larned twisted his knee and could not continue. Tennis rules do not permit a player to leave the court for more than a few minutes. It was a physical impossibility for Larned to continue and the match should have gone to Gardner by default. The latter refused to accept the default and match in that fashion and after some time the match was continued and Larned won.

What greater instance of sportsmanship is needed than to cite the case of Sir Thomas Lipton in the last race for the America's cup in 1920 when he refused to take the victory of his Shamrock over the Resolute when the latter broke its mast. Lipton refused to accept the win, but he was forced to do so by the rules of the race though he fought in every way to have the race called "no race."

The case of Wiselander of Sweden is another case of fine sportsmanship though there may be a question of perverse opinion in it. When Jim Thorpe was professionalized after the Stockholm Olympic games, Wiselander was awarded the honors of the Stockholm all-round as being second to Thorpe. The Swede refused to take the prizes saying he did not win them and was not entitled to them. The Swedish Athletic Union forced the issue but Wiselander again refused, with the result that he was debarred for further competition and was not named on the 1920 Swedish Olympic games. To an American way of figuring Wiselander was the sportsman, but the Athletic Union showed a lack of this element by debarring such an unselfish athlete.

The WORLD OVER

By FRANKLIN B. MORSE
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

Municipal fathers, forced to concede the rapidly growing numbers of golfers and no longer being able to ignore the fact that good links are a potent factor in attracting players and tourists, also will quickly have to come to a realization that the players are entirely dependent on them for the privilege of playing.

Unlike tennis, that can be played on the grounds of a private home, recreation park or center; unlike baseball, which can be taken up in the vacant lot or fair-sized field, golf requires a large acreage set apart for its indulgence. To the citizens who are not able to pay the heavy initiation fees and dues of a private club, it simply means that the municipality must be the Santa Claus.

Nothing better serves to demonstrate the fact that notwithstanding the constantly increasing number of private golf clubs and their high rates of admission and dues, there are few existing organizations that have not a waiting list and new organizations quickly are filled to the limit set. Under these conditions, only those who are possessed of considerable bank accounts are able to put the sum required into the game.

There is only a relatively small proportion of the population that is able to afford from $25 to $50 a month for the privilege of playing the game. For growing boys and girls, whose parents are obliged to pay for their fun, it would seem that a municipal links should be able to provide the recreation for about $5 a month or less. The vast majority of players probably feel that about ten dollars a month is about all they can pay.

All over the country today there are municipal links which are giving their communities golfing facilities at, or under these figures, and it will be a short-sighted policy to allow any gradual increases if the game is to be encouraged as it should be, for nothing ever before has given such universal pleasure to thousands of persons, both young and old.

Baseball and football are games in which few participate and the majority look on. Golf is essentially an outdoor sport in which, excepting in the case of a gallery following some big championship match, all are participants in the actual play. It is a game at which all can play, as shown by the fact that we have had among our American National golf champions, title holders in their teens and men in the middle span of life. More than this, we read of John D. Rockefeller, an octogenarian, getting pleasure and exercise out of his game on the links.

The municipality which is not making provision for its future golfers by keeping in sight accessible acreage at present comparatively lower prices, is a short-sighted one. Golf must, today, be considered as an economic force in a community.

JAPAN NOW SEEKS TO MAKE FRIENDS WITH CHINESE

Growth of Chinese Unity Is Threat to Security of Island Empire

By JAMES M'CLAIN
For International News Service.

TOKIO—Since the Washington conference stripped Japan of her old militaristic policy of predomination in China elements in this country have been unable to agree as to what course should be followed in peaceful commercial penetration. The old plan of military control followed by commercial expansion has been discarded; the powers of the world, particularly the United States, refused to sanction it, and, in addition, there was a goodly wing of Japanese liberals who disapproved it. Now peaceful co-operation with China in the Far East, wherein Japan is able to develop Chinese resources and secure much needed raw materials, is to be fostered.

There can be no question as to which Japan seeks, for a hostile China means that when that long-expected day comes China will be a strong, unified nation, and the first thing that a strong and hostile China will do will be to wage a war of revenge upon her island neighbor. Japan's object, then, is to encourage a friendly China.

Offers New Method

The jingo element in Japan comes forth with a new method for so doing. It would convince China of the need of an alliance of Oriental races against possible western invasion and suppression. Speaking editorially of this possibility, the Yorodzu, organ of the jingoes, says, in part:

"The fact is too obvious to deny that, owing to the occupation of too wide areas of the world by the whites, the other races have been left without sufficient areas for their development. The tendency of the whites to shut their doors upon the Japanese race is becoming more and more accentuated every day. In these circumstances the Japanese are left with no other course than to seek an alliance to prevent the destruction of their race."

That paragraph sums up the reasons advanced by this element of the Japanese, which, it must be said, is small and uninfluential. The majority of the Japanese are exerting every possible effort to secure a friendly China. The various Shantung commissions, now meeting in Peking, are negotiating the return of Japanese-held properties in the territory seized from Germany and are anxious to grant the Peking government very reasonable terms of payment. Japan is withdrawing the railway guards from Manchuria despite strong protest from residents there.

No Chinese Response

But China's attitude in receiving back what justly belongs to her is not as conciliatory as Tokio had wished. In fact, the Peking officials are growing arrogant. One of Dr. Wellington Koo's first acts as foreign minister was to announce that China would seek the return of the Kwantung peninsula next year. This territory was acquired by the Liaotung lease for 25 years by Russia; wrested from Russia by Japan in the Russo-Japanese war and, in 1915, taken from China for 99 years in the Chino-Japanese agreement which became a part of the twenty-one demands. The original Russian lease of 25 years expires in 1923. Dr. Koo's stand is that the Chinese people have never sanctioned the Japanese lease and that the territory should revert to China.

The Koo statement serves at the present to indicate the future. The Sino-Japanese alliance against the white race is possible. Furthermore, a China as friendly to Japan as is wished is still far in the distance.

HATREDS CAUSE OF MANY DEATHS IN INDIANA FEUD

Trouble Dates Back to Year 1882 and Is Continued to Present Time

By HORACE M. COATS
International News Service.

SHOALS, Ind. — Another life has been forfeited, and the sixth member of the Archer family of southern Martin county, has "died with his boots on" as a result of a family feud that has raged there for several years, it was revealed here following the fatal shooting, from ambush, of Clyde Archer, 19, recently.

For years Hoosiers have been wont to look with pity, if not disdain, on the family feuds which have "wiped out" hundreds of members of warring families of the Bluegrass state. But apparently in Indiana's backyard a family feud has been raging for years between the Archer and Stanfield families which has resulted in several deaths.

Clyde Archer met his death recently. About a year previous young Archer had killed his man at French Lick, Ind., when he stabbed Roy Stanfield, a neighbor, who accused Archer of stealing some money. He was acquitted in court on a plea of self-defense.

Row of Old Standing

The two families had harbored ill feelings against each other for many years following the killing of Annabel Stanfield by Charles Archer, an uncle of Clyde. The older Archer was acquitted of this crime, and a few years later a brother of Clyde was freed of a murder charge.

Back in 1882 Martin Archer was killed by a man named Marley, who was afraid Archer might tell of a larceny job in which the murderer, his victim and John B. Bunch were implicated. This killing aroused the ire of the Archer family, the members of which swore vengeance.

The Archers, accompanied by John Lynch, went in search of Marley and, being unable to find him, discovered Bunch. When Bunch declined to reveal the hiding place of Marley the Archers bound him, took him to Saltpeter Cave, in Orange county, Indiana, a loney spot near the home of Tom Archer.

Here they again demanded of Bunch that he tell where Marley was hiding. As Bunch repeated his statement that he did not know the whereabouts of Marley, the Achers shot him to death and left his body in the cave several days.

Later they removed the corpse, placed it upon a pile of brush which had been saturated with coal oil, and burned it. Then a tree was felled and placed over the crime.

Confesses to Crime

Four years later Lynch, conscience stricken, confessed to the crime. Following the confession Thomas Archer, 65, and Martin Archer, 50, brothers, were arrested. Then John Archer, 30, was taken into custody in connection with the grewsome murder.

All three were placed in jail at Shoals. Sam Archer, father of John, and another member of the murder band, was still at large.

At midnight, March 9, 1886, a band of armed, masked men, visited the Shoals jail, removed the three Archers and hanged them to trees in the court house yard. Their bodies were permitted to hang there until 11 o'clock the next morning.

A short time later Sam Archer was apprehended, tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged. The execution took place July 9, 1886, in the presence of what was termed a "circus day" crowd assembled about the scaffold.

All that saved Lynch from being a victim of the execution of the mob that hanged the three Archers, was the fact he was confined in the Daviess county jail.

Since that time the hatred between the two families has grown apace, and members of each family are on guard always for an outbreak of the feud.

MOTORLESS FLIGHT BY GERMAN TO ROUSE ACTION

Engineers Split Over Value of Feat; French Will Seek to Excel

By HERBERT M. DAVIDSON
For International News Service.

PARIS.—Many French aeronautic authorities are pooh-poohing, in published statements, the importance of the three-hour motorless flight made by the German, Hentzen, at Wasserkuppe, which no French aviator has been able to duplicate.

Other authoritative opinion, however, and the announcement of prizes to stimulate French ambitions in this direction, indicate that light dismissal of Germany's achievement is a clear case of "sour grapes."

It is even hinted that should Germany develop motorless flying beyond the experimental stage it would give that nation an opportunity to manufacture a formidable military weapon without violating the treaty of Versailles, which forbids the manufacture of military airplanes, at least of the ordinary motored variety.

"The results obtained by the Germans are most remarkable," writes Andre Michelin, in a letter in which, through Le Matin, he offers a 15,000-franc prize to stimulate effort toward the improvement of motorless flying in France. "They constitute an enormous progress in knowledge of the air and the technique of aviation.

"We must not let the Germans outdistance us. Flight without motor will shortly become practicable over long distances. Let us not forget that two Frenchmen—Mouillard and Marcy—laid the foundation years ago for these discoveries. It is our duty to dispute with foreigners the honor of perfecting their work."

Prizes Offered

The Michelin prize, successor of a long series of Michelin prizes which have done much to advance French aviation, is for the longest distance in a straight line covered by a French aviator in a motorless plane before October 31, providing the distance is more than eighteen miles.

"Motorless flight has a future; it is not a chimera," writes R. Quinton, vice president of the French Aeronautic League, in Le Matin. "It has been realized in nature. Certain birds employ it, and it alone, to the exclusion of flight by wing-beating.

Urges Parents Give Care to Young Folk

Mrs. H. W. Yarick, clerk of the First Congregational church of Glendale, sends to The Glendale Evening News the following resolution which, she states, was adopted by the church yesterday:

"Whereas, the attention of the community has been publicly called to the fact that a party of Glendale young people of high school age recently went to a neighboring city and there attended an unchaperoned dance, at which intoxicating liquor was obtained and consumed, and that some of those present became intoxicated and conducted themselves in an unseemly and improper manner; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the First Congregational church of Glendale, that we strongly condemn all such affairs, and that we take this occasion to express our belief that their occurrence in our midst indicates a need for a higher standard of parental responsibility, and we hereby call the attention of all parents and others having the custody or control of the youth of our city to the dangers of allowing them to gather without adequate supervision, and we urge upon all parents and guardians the necessity for the exercise by them of the greatest care in discharge of their God-given responsibility for the training and guidance of their children, in order to ensure the moral soundness of the rising generation; and further, that we call this matter to the attention of the authorities in charge of our public schools and pledge them our hearty support in all steps they may take for the purpose of preventing such undermining of the character of the pupils in their charge. The clerk is hereby directed to send copies of this resolution to the Glendale papers, to the High School board, and to the Board of Education, and to the Glendale Ministers' association."

MOTHER, 80, SONS GONE 58 YEARS TO MEET AGAIN

Aged Parent, In Poorhouse Long Time, Happy at Finding Her 'Boys'

By KENNETH HARRIS
For International News Service.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Just when the clouds of adversity hung heaviest over the pathway of life of Mrs. Mary Margaret Roper, 80, a resident at the county poor house, a ray of sunshine pierced through. For the aged woman has just found her two sons, who were kidnaped fifty-eight years ago. Nearly sixty years she had spent alternately hoping and despairing of finding her boys, who were literally snatched from her arms when they were scarcely able to toddle. More than $10,000—thirty years' back pension—will be her financial compensation for the heartaches experienced in the years which have elapsed since baby fingers caressingly toyed with locks of a mother's tresses whose marital craft at that time was sailing upon a calm sea.

Bluebird Comes

There is a spring in Mrs. Roper's step these days, and she is all smiles. Her "Bluebird of Happiness" apparently has flown into her window. The cheap calico dresses which have graced the hooks in the little room at the home of the aged, where Mrs. Roper has made quilts for the last ten years, have been discarded. In their stead several black silk ones with lace fringes around the collars, have appeared.

This woman, whose more than three score and ten years have failed to perceptibly halt her step or dim her vision, received a letter from one of her sons—Joseph—in which he expressed himself as overjoyed, she said to learn she was alive. He extended her a cordial invitation to come live with him and his family. This Mrs. Roper has planned to do. Her other son, Charles, is married and has two children.

A prominent local attorney, who often visits the poor house and whose philanthropic actions keep him constantly in the limelight, received a cheery greeting from Mrs. Roper when he visited her. This man has been a marketing agent for her handiwork for some time.

Won't Make Quilts

Smiling, she shook hands with her benefactor. "I won't be making quilts for you any more," she explained. "That money I was saving to bury myself with I've spent in buying clothes to go to my son. You see, I have a family now."

She then showed the attorney several photographs of Charles and Joseph, which were taken when the children were one and four years old, respectively. Her friends—and they are legion—wagered that no woman in Jackson county is any prouder or happier than she.

Shortly after Lee surrendered to Grant at Richmond, Mrs. Ropers' husband returned to Springfield, Ohio, their home, she said. Scarcely a week elapsed when Roper and his wife quarreled. Roper departed for parts unknown the following day, taking the children with him.

The strain of the separation from her loved ones proved too much for the deserted wife and mother. She went to the home of her sister to recuperate and made her home there until her sister's death.

DECREASE REPORT IN CHILD LABOR IS QUALIFIED

Figures Show Marked Falling Off, but Close Inspection Alters Conclusion

By KARL M. ELISH
For International News Service.

WASHINGTON—The marked decrease in the number of children between 10 and 15 years old who are at work, shown by census figures for 1920 just published, is more apparent than real, according to Dr. Alba M. Edwards, census expert of the department of commerce. The question of child labor remains a problem, accentuated by the supreme court's recent decision, despite the optimistic figures of the census of 1920.

The number of boys and girls at work in 1920, according to the statistics, compiled as of January 1 of that year, was 1,060,858, a decrease of 929,367 from the 1910 figures. But—and here is what largely nullifies the encouragement of the 1920 census—the 1910 census was compiled in mid-April, when spring planting operations were at the peak, and farmers throughout the country were begging for help. In January, however, the number of farm laborers is at its lowest ebb.

"It is believed," Dr. Edwards' report states, "that when the enumeration was made in 1920 many children usually employed as farm laborers were not then at work and were not returned by the census enumerators as gainfully occupied. This appears to have been true especially in the case of children living on the home farm. The enumerators' schedules show that a considerable proportion of such children were returned as neither attending school nor being gainfully occupied."

Gain Inconsistent

On the face of the census returns only 647,309 children of both sexes were engaged in farm work in 1920, as against 1,434,428 in 1910. But too many children were enumerated as farm laborers in 1910, according to Dr. Edwards, who pointed out that, although an increase of 34.8 per cent occurred between 1900 and 1910 in the number of children employed on farms, there was "no similar increase in the total number of persons engaged in agricultural pursuits."

The decrease in the number of child wage-earners in 1920 was widespread throughout the country. Both in cities and rural districts the figures show marked decreases. In only two classifications did their number increase—clerical occupations and "public service"—where their numbers jumped from 537 to 1130 and 71,001 to 80,140, respectively. All the states showed decreases in the proportion of boys gainfully employed, with the District of Columbia standing alone with an increase. In the proportion of girls at work Arizona and the District of Columbia were the only units to show increases.

Decreased in Cities

Child labor decreased proportionately in most of the sixty-eight cities of over 100,000 population, only six showing increase in the proportion of girls. In the cities of 25,000 to 100,000 population the proportion of working boys in 1920 was larger than in the cities of over 100,000. A comparison of the girls at work shows a smaller proportion in favor of the smaller cities.

One of the most significant decreases in child labor was in mines and quarries, in which category are included oil, gas and salt wells. From a total of 18,090 in 1910 the total dropped to 7191 in 1920. Curiously enough, however, the number of girls in this category rose from 71 in 1910 to 146 in 1920, the increase being largely accounted for by an increase of 70 working in coal mines.

The encouraging decreases in child labor figures Dr. Edwards attributed in part to increased legal restrictions, more stringent compulsory school attendance laws and the better enforcement of these classes of laws.

"It is probable, also," he wrote, "that the greater popular disapproval of child labor decreased the tendency to employ children."

BIG BERTHAS DIM ANY CHANCES OF ALLIED BREAK

Great Britain and France Face Good Argument to Continue Entente

By HARRY L. ROGERS
For International News Service.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The "Big Bertha" is likely to prove one of the most effective arguments for continuing the entente between Great Britain and France.

This opinion, advanced first by General Herr, Inspector-General of French Artillery and one of the heroes of Verdun, is receiving the serious consideration of British politicians and military experts alike, and probably will have its influence in the determination of British policy toward France, according to advices just received here from London.

With modern, long-range cannon, General Herr declares, France could control the English Channel and bombard many English cities, including London, while Great Britain, with the same instruments of modern warfare, could level Lille, Le Havre, Arras or Amiens.

Could Increase Range

The range of Germany's "Big Berthas" used during the war reached 130 kilometres, but this could indubitably be increased," said General Herr. "One may be sure that the average range of artillery in the next war will be 140 kilometres and that, thanks to the betterment of metallurgy and ballistics, the range may attain even 200 kilometres. In such circumstances the allies could keep under fire Westphalia, the duchies

Looking out over the city he said:

"We are at the beginning here in southern California of establishing one of the greatest empires the world has ever known."

In continuing he re-told the parable of the two stewards and their use of the talents the Master entrusted to them. To the wise steward who made the most of his talent he compared the man who is taking advantage of the worthwhile realty investments in the southland, especially in Glendale.

Shoots Sweetheart and Takes Own Life

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 16.—Miss Helen Stackhouse, 18, lies in a hospital today seriously injured because she refused to resume her engagement to A. T. Reed, 23, a draftsman, who shot her and then took his own life.

Reed called at the girl's home Sunday and begged her to again become his fiancee. Failing, after an argument of fifteen minutes, he suddenly drew a revolver and fired, the bullet narrowly missing her heart. Turning the revolver upon himself, one bullet brought instant death.

Physicians today said that Miss Stackhouse would recover.

DECLARES BONUS WAR JUST BEGUN

National Commander Opens American Legion Meet With Hot Attack

By J. BART CAMPBELL

For International News Service.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 16.—While his "buddies" shouted and stamped their approval, retiring National Commander Hanford Macnider opened the fourth annual convention of the American legion here today with a militant declaration that the soldier bonus fight has only just begun.

From out of the long, hard battle he and his aides directed unsuccessfully to put the "adjusted compensation" bill over the top at Washington, Macnider asserted that "no one man, untouched by war, without kith or kin to those who served, no one group, financial or otherwise, can stand between the wishes of the American people and the fulfillment of what they believe to be a government obligation."

He made no direct reference to the veto by President Harding of the McCumber-Fordney bonus measure nor to the little group of senators who sustained the veto but he left no doubt as to whom he referred as he carefully aimed each of his barbed verbal shafts at the opponents of "adjusted compensation" for the nation's ex-service men.

Sordid and Selfish

"A great, well financed attack which we cannot help but feel as sordid and selfish has given us one little setback but those who represent the people at Washington are with us by big majorities," Macnider declared, as he dwelt on the passage of the McCumber-Fordney bill by a vote of 333 to 70 in the house and 47 to 22 in the senate.

"We have only just started to fight," he said. "The 'adjusted compensation' legislation is right. It is not a question of raising the necessary funds. A maximum annual payment of $100,000,000 is not even an appreciable fraction of a $4,000,000,000 national budget. That is simply camouflage, thrown us to hide the real issue.

"It is a question of promises unfilled, a question of whether the man who offered his life to his country in time of need is to be left with the feeling that his country is unjust and ungrateful.

"That is not for the good of the nation; that is not the desire of the people back home and in a republic their will must be eventually carried out. That is our task and we shall accomplish it."

Scathing Condemnation

Upon the scathing condemnation of the national government's care of sick and disabled world war veterans and the biting criticisms of President Harding and his personal physician, Brigadier General Charles E. Sawyer, chief co-ordinator of the federal board of hospitalization, contained in the 158-page report made public previously by A. A. Sprague of Chicago, chairman of the legion's national rehabilitation committee, Macnider stamped his unqualified approval.

"The committee," Macnider said, "forms a permanent foundation for all our future work for the disabled men. What is more, it means that he is going to receive a square deal from the country he fought for. I feel that during the past year tremendous results for the betterment of the disabled veterans—our first duty always—have been attained."

Reverting to the first American meeting of the inter-allied federation of world war veterans being held here in conjunction with the legion convention, Macnider declared this organization "has tremendous possibilities—a dream, perhaps—but in its fulfillment is a promise of tremendous service to all the world."

In referring to the falling off of the legion's membership in the past year, Macnider said that he was well aware of the "definite stand which has been taken in carrying out your commands has not aided in recruiting or holding those who place financial gods as their gods, or who are not willing as good Americans to forget their personal prejudices to help serve the whole."

TELLS CLASS OF CHRIST'S PRAYER

Rev. Keith L. Brooks Asserts World's Only Hope Is Found In Cross

The intercessory prayer, which Christ offered for His disciples and all who should believe on Him, was the subject of discussion yesterday morning by the Men's Bible class of the Presbyterian church.

"It is wonderful that we should be permitted to hear the outpouring of His desires for His own as they were compressed into these last moments," declared Rev. Keith L. Brooks. "It is inconceivable that this prayer could have been cunningly framed by human author. There is a divine insight and discernment of the needs of man which he could never be aware of himself. In its sevenfold perfection it covers all of our deepest spiritual necessities.

"Some would have us believe that we do not have the words of God in the Bible but simply His thoughts. But how could we be sure that we had His thoughts unless He had imparted fitting words? Not one of us would care to leave it to our best friend to express our thoughts in some very important matter. On this statement of Christ stands the whole fabric of Christian creed. The Gospel has its power in the fact that the Father gave to the Son and Son to His disciples words that correctly express His thought for man.

Only Hope of Cross

"He says in this prayer that He does not pray for the world but only for those who have received Him. The world's only hope is the cross. If any one prays for the world, it must be believers. Christ's intercession is only for the saved to make them secure to the uttermost limit of time. He here commits back into His Father's hands those who had been given Him, thus making God Himself responsible for the safe keeping of those who have received Him. The believer's safety therefore rests upon the Father's faithfulness to His Son.

"The first of seven petitions for human needs is that believers might be preserved. The trouble with many Christians today is that they do not really believe much of anything beyond the fact that salvation is possible through Christ.

"His second petition is for the satisfaction of His people that 'they might have His joy fulfilled in themselves.'"

BIRTHDAY PARTY GIVEN SATURDAY

Eagle Rock Girl Celebrates Fifteenth Year With Many Friends

Miss Pauline Miller of 219 South Castle avenue celebrated her fifteenth birthday Saturday night with an old-fashioned birthday party with fifteen girl friends, including the entire membership of the Gingham Gown Girls, of which Miss Miller is said to be the high priestess.

Among the guests were Miss Evelyn Warick, Miss Bernice Waller and Miss Elizabeth Force, all of Claremont, Calif., Miss Miller's former home.

Among the girls from Eagle Rock were the Misses Phyllis and Katherine Nelson, Miss Elizabeth Richardson, Miss Edith Baker, Miss Clara Hanson, the Misses Donna and Evelyn Sample and Alice Parker.

The guests danced to music supplied through the courtesy of the Hancock Music company and at 10:30 all went to the Eagle Rock cafe where a luncheon was served.

Band Concert Proves Popular With Crowd

The first weekly public band concert to be given on Sunday afternoon by the members of the local Elks' band in front of the high school yesterday afternoon proved a popular attraction, according to C. M. Burke, manager. The concerts had heretofore been held on Friday evenings, but on account of the cooler weather the time was changed to Sunday afternoons in order that a larger number of residents might avail themselves of the opportunity of attending.

CHINA IS BROKE, WITHOUT CREDIT

Owes Two Billions, Part to Japan, Not Secured; No More Securities

PEKIN—China's inability to get a substantial loan, either foreign or domestic, at a time when she needs it seriously, is explained by a report of her financial status, compiled by Chinese and members of some of the legation staffs.

China owes in round numbers $2,000,000,000 and of this total, $440,000,000 is unsecured, or the security is wholly inadequate.

The remainder is secured by the customs, such salt revenues as have not been seized by the provinces, the railroads and the telegraphs.

The largest single unsecured debt is to the Nishihara banking group in Japan, which loaned, without asking security, $150,000,000 when the Anfu or pro-Japanese government was in power.

In Spite of Protest

A year ago the unsecured loans did not exceed $200,000,000, but since that time the provinces have seized the salt fields. Wu Pei-fu seized the revenues of the Peking-Hankow railroad and Chang Tso-lin seized the northern half of the Peking-Mukden railroad. Wu Pei-fu also seized a portion of the telegraph revenues. These government enterprises have had a measure of foreign supervision to insure reasonable efficiency, but the properties have been seized by the military despite the protests of foreign investors.

Just one good security remains, the customs. That source is under rigid foreign control and being established mainly in port cities accessible to foreign gunboats, is in little danger of seizure.

Taxed to Limit

The customs is taxed to the present limit by foreign loans, only a small portion each month being available for the government. An increase of one and a half per cent is soon to go into effect, but most of this increase, according to the Washington conference agreement, must go for liquidating the foreign debts.

The military expenses must wait under any condition, and this is nine-tenths of the whole governmental expense of China.

Makes Statement on Improving Patterson

Relative to the proposed improvement of Patterson avenue, C. W. Kinnan, 368 Patterson avenue, makes the following estimate and statement:

"4 lots on Orange and 2 on Central, at $3500 each	$21,000
"75 feet on Brand at $250 per foot	18,750
"2 houses on Orange and Central at $7500 each	15,000
"10 corners, round $75 each	750
Total	$55,000

"To approximate number of lots included in assessment district, for instance, in the territory between Central and Columbus, and Arden and Milford, including both sides of the last two named streets, there are 38 lots to the block; then these six blocks would make 328 lots; then the territory between Central and Brand, and between Columbus and Pacific and the same north and south lines would add about twice as many more lots, or make 984 lots; then territory from Pacific to Kenilworth, with same north and south lines would make probably 300 more, or nearly 1200 in all; deduction of some lots would have to be made for the schoolhouse property and the Patterson avenue park, but the amount of the deduction is about made up by the greater number of lots west of Pacific, because of those lots being so much shorter than those east of Pacific.

The assessment district is many times greater than the area suggested, probably all of ten times as great; but figure it, for instance, at 5000 lots in all, which is far short of the total, it would still make the average assessment only a trifle over $10 per lot, and anybody knows the very large majority of the lots will be assessed for less than the average amount, rather than for more, because of the very heavy assessment that will be put against the Brand boulevard lots. Nobody can be assessed enough to hurt.

"It was reported on Saturday a lot just sold on Central north of Doran, for $3250; the lots on Orange as not worth as much as similarly located lots on Central; therefore estimating these lots at $3500 is liberal; besides, there will be a fraction of each of these lots which will be salvaged by sale to adjoining property, and this sum will be used to reduce the total cost of the project.

"The Brand boulevard ground being business property purely, there will be no occasion to condemn an inch there, more than is needed for the right of way.

"Seventy-five dollars per lot is very liberal for the small portion taken off each of the corner lots by way of rounding them off.

"I also think that $7500 each for the two houses in question, if they are condemned, is very liberal; if the arrangements can be made with the owners to retain the houses and move them off, then the cost will be again reduced by a very considerable amount."
